Hussein threatens attack on Israel

United Press International

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein said Sunday he would attack Israel and oil fields in Saudi Arabia if his country is "suffocated" by mounting international efforts to force Iraqi troops from Kuwait.

Iraq also charged Sunday that the United States has refused permission for an Iraqi plan to land in New York so that Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz can attend a U.N. General Assembly meeting, and U.S. Secretary of State James Baker scoffed at reports the United States failed to warn Iraq against invading Kuwait.

Saddam's message, broadcast on Baghdad radio, reiterated many of the threats Iraq has made in the past, none of which have yet come

Sources: U.S. plans multi-front attack on Iraq

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Top U.S. Army and Marine officers have drawn up plans for ground assaults against Iraq from as many as four directions, a complex combat operation designed to split Saddam Hussein's forces, it was reported Sunday.

The Washington Post, citing unidentified military sources, said the plans would require American troops to cross the Jordanian desert and Turkish mountains to reach the Iraqi frontier.

The purpose of the multiple assaults would be to prevent the Iraqi president from massing his entire 140,000-man elite Republican Guard against any U.S. invasion force that might be called to attack Iraqi occupation troops in Kuwait, the Post said.

The contingency plans for the multi-front war against Iraq are among the military options being prepared for President Bush in case the U.N. trade embargo following Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, and now the U.N. Security Council has devised a plan to enforce the sanctions by air as well.

Saddam's statement, issued after a joint meeting of the ruling Revolution Command Council and Baath Socialist party, said if would make the West suffer by halting the flow of oil from the Middle East.

It reiterated that Iraq would be one of Iraq's first targets should fighting erupt and that Iraq had no intention of retreating from Kuwait.

In a move to further consolidate its grip on Kuwait, Iraq announced Sunday it was abolishing the Kuwaiti dinar and replacing it with Iraqi currency with a one-on-one to pass.

But it was one of the strongest statements yet by the besieged Iraqi leader and for the first time suggested he was ready to fight over sanctions. Previously he has indicated he would only attack if attacked first by Western forces.

"If we felt the people of Iraq are suffocating and there is somebody dealing to them a bloody blow, we will make all those causing it suffocate," the statement said.

De Klerk visits U.S. for high-level talks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — South African President Frederik W. De Klerk arrived Sunday for high level talks, quoting civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. and declaring that South Africa is on "a great journey toward full democracy."

De Klerk, the first South African leader to visit the United States since 1945, made the remarks upon arrival at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., at 8:15 a.m. EDT.

De Klerk, recalling the words of King, said, "Peace and freedom are the goals of all men. South Africa has embarked on a great journey. It is a journey for full democracy at home and abroad full participation in the family of nations."

Hours after De Klerk's arrival, anti-apartheid protesters gathered in Lafayette Square across from the White House.

Dei. Walter Fauntroy, D-D.C., Washington's non-voting member of Congress, said he intended to press his fellow lawmakers to continue sanctions against South Africa and even to expand them unless Pretoria ends what he described as assassination squads and drops assault and kidnapping charges against Winnie Mandela, wife of black South African leader Nelson Mandela.

"We must keep the pressure on," Fauntroy said. "The people of South Africa need us as never before. Until we see the progress we have demanded, we're going to keep up the pressure."

In South Africa, Nelson Mandela charged Sunday that the government imposed tough military-style steps to curb black factional fighting mainly to restore calm during De Klerk's visit.

Mandela said government forces "pretend De Klerk has put an end to the violence. That is not true." He asserted the timing of the measures was "mainly to smooth De Klerk's way" on his U.S. trip.

De Klerk smiled as he stepped from a helicopter on the grounds of

Undetained U.S. hostages leave Kuwait

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — What may be the last group of American hostages brought out of occupied Kuwait in a mass evacuation flew to the United States Sunday after an overnight stopover in London.

North Carolina officials and volunteers planned a hearty red, white and blue welcome at Raleigh-Durham Airport, with the same patriotic fervor that marked two earlier freedom flights to

No additional evacuation flights planned

Raleigh from the Persian Gulf.

The State Department has said no additional evacuation flights are planned, because it is believed all the Americans who are free to leave occupied Kuwait — mostly women and children — and who wish to do so have been accommodated.

A U.S. Embassy official in London said, however, that more flights could be scheduled if they are needed.

Officials in North Carolina were advised that 114 hostages — 97 adults and 17 children — were aboard the World Airways DC-10 scheduled to arrive Sunday evening from London.

But U.S. Embassy officials in London said 112 people, Americans and Canadians, were on the plane. There was no immediate explanation for the difference in the figures.

The Americans and Canadians had been among a group of about 184 people of mixed nationalities that arrived at London's Gatwick Airport on an Iraqi flight from

Proposed law calls for campus crime reports

By Douglas Powell

The murder of five students at the University of Florida at Gainesville has caused much alarm on campuses across the nation and among the parents of college students. The murders also have called attention to pending federal legislation that would require universities and colleges to report crime statistics.

The Student Right to Know Bill,

First of two stories on campus crime issues.

passed by the House and Senate this summer, would require universities and colleges to provide students and parents with crime statistics. Before the bill goes before President George Bush, the House and Senate will create a conference committee to iron out the differences in the bill, U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Carrollville, said.

SIU-C has compiled crime statistics ranging from homicide to parking tickets since before 1985 and Bob Harris, University Police director, said few parents or students request such information.

"It's not that parents don't care. They just don't think about it," Harris said. "This semester only one parent has asked the University Police for crime figures."

He said the most important

Salukis lose 56-21; threaten early

Saluki senior linebacker Brian Miller tries to corral the Fighting Illini's senior running back Howard Griffith at Illinois' Memorial Stadium Saturday. Griffith went on to break two NCAA rushing records in the U of I's 56-21 win.

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

More than 64,000 fans sat in disbelief of what they saw at 3:00 p.m. Saturday at University of Illinois' Memorial Stadium. SIU 21 - Illinois 7.

"I hope somebody took a picture of the scoreboard," SIU-C head coach Bob Smith said.

The Salukis were picture perfect in the first quarter of its eventual 56-21 loss to the Illini. But the Illini's running back Howard Griffith took care of that.

Griffith gave one of the greatest statistical performances in college football history, scoring on eight touchdown runs while gaining 208 ground yards. His 48 points broke the record of 43 held by Syracuse's Jim Brown. He also broke the Illini record of five touchdowns, held by Red Grange.

"He's a great back," middle linebacker Kevin Kilgallon said. "He's probably the best I've played against."

But until Griffith turned immortal and woke up a dormant Illini squad, it looked like the Salukis were going to go down in the record books with an amazing upset of the 15th ranked Fighting Illini.

After Illinois got an early 7-0 lead, the Saluki offense charged down the field mixing catches by sophomore receiver Johnny Roots (five catches), and strong runs by sophomore running back Yonel Jourdain (43 yards rushing). Junior quarterback Brian Downey, who hit on five of six passes on the 82-yard drive, avoided the pass rush and hit freshman receiver Billy Swain on a crossing pattern in the end zone to tie the score.

"We were all excited and ready to play," Downey said. "We executed real well early. On the TD I tried to get out of pressure. I decided to check the third and fourth receiver. Billy was there, he made a great catch."

Just two plays later Griffith broke over the left side and appeared to have running room, but Kilgallon popped Griffith and stripped him of the ball, all in one motion. Kilgallon was already five yards into his 27-yard fumble return touchdown before the crowd realized Griffith had gotten his pocket picked.

The Saluki fans in Memorial Stadium's visiting stand were livid, chanting "S-I-U" again and again, after gaining the lead on the heavily favored Fighting Illini. The Saluki players were even more rowdy, pounding each others pads and celebrating the lead.

The fired up Saluki defense was right back on the field after Kilgallon's heist. Saluki senior defensive line man Eric Mullen led the Saluki rush on Illini quarterback Jason Verdusco. Mullen knocked the sense and the ball from Verdusco and freshman Darnell Laurent recovered. The Saluki offense was back in business at the Illinois 36-yard line.

Two Downey to Roots completions and a pair of Jourdain runs set up a first and 10 at the Illinois 11-yard line. Downey dropped back to pass, but then handed to Jourdain on a draw. The Saluki line opened up a big hole and Jourdain breezed in for the score.

The game clock had less than a minute left in the quarter. One Saluki player on the sidelines said what all Saluki fans must have been hoping.

"I wish that was the time left for

Salukis give Fighting Illini big scare

From the Press Box

It's often said that first impressions are the most important and the Salukis made one heck of a first impression on the University of Illinois Saturday afternoon.

The Salukis got a taste of Big 10 football, but the Fighting Illini had just about all they could stomach of Saluki football. At least in the beginning of the ballgame.

Sure the Salukis were blown out 56-21, but more than 60,000 U of I fans will long remember the scare the Dawgs gave them in the first quarter when they stampeded down the field to take a 21-7 lead.

There probably is nothing more impressive than to see such great fans back a football team, as is the case in Champaign. But what was even more remarkable was when the Salukis quieted the crowd and all you could hear were Saluki fans yelling "Do it like a big Dawg."

In fact, if it weren't for the Saluki fans, the only noise in Memorial Stadium would have been the corn popping and the public address announcer reminding everyone of the surprising score.

It wasn't until the middle of the second quarter, when Illini senior fullback Howard Griffith started his record-

Former Saluki Taylor banned from NFL

Cornerback Terry Taylor of the Detroit Lions has been forced to take some time off to think about his future. Last Thursday, the former Saluki All-American became the seventh NFL player to be banned for life under the league's drug policy after his third positive substance abuse test.

The Lions acquired Taylor from the Seattle Seahawks last season. The Lions will not appeal the league's action and Taylor will be able to reapply for admission to the league in one year.

Taylor tested positive for substance abuse in 1987 and 1988.

He has participated in drug treatment programs since his first positive test.

Taylor could not be reached for comment.

Taylor was chosen by the Seahawks in the first round of the NFL draft in May of 1984 as the 22nd player. He signed a four-year, $1 million contract with Seattle.

He was selected as a Kodak Division I-AA All-American in 1983 after an impressive career at SIU-C, during which he intercepted a school-record 20 passes.

Taylor was a vital part of the Salukis I-AA championship season in 1983, when SIU-C defeated Western Carolina and came away with the national title.

Former Saluki football coach Ray Dempsey, who led the Salukis to the championship that year, once called it "the greatest season I've ever been connected with."

"Terry's a natural athlete," Dempsey said. "December of 1983. He asked you on the football field. He has great quickness, agility and leaping ability (a vertical leap of 41 inches)."

Dempsey said today that Taylor was not involved in a drugs to his knowledge during his career at SIU-C and "was shocked the first time he got caught in 1987."

"He was the best defensive player I ever had, and the best all-around athlete," Dempsey said.

"I feel bad about it and I wish it never would have happened. I hope he gets help and gets off the stuff."

Dempsey recruited the 5-foot-11 athlete from Youngstown, Ohio.

Other athletes banned for life by the NFL are Indianapolis' Tony Collins, Earl Ferrell of Phoenix, Dexter Manley of Washington, Frank Warren of New Orleans, Charles White of the Los Angeles Rams and Stanley Wilson of Cincinnati.

Taylor's 1990 preseason performance for the Lions was exceptional. In two games he made two interceptions, one of which he was able to return for a touchdown.

During his NFL career Taylor had 309 tackles and 16 interceptions.

Spikers fall apart after leading Redbirds 2-0

By Julie Autor

The Saluki volleyball team made 13 service aces against Louisville Friday night but that was not enough to stop the Redbirds from knocking down SIU-C in a tough five-game match.

The Redbirds beat the Salukis 6-15, 11-15, 15-5, 15-11 and 15-10 to leave the Salukis standing at 6-6 for the season.

SIU-C volleyball coach Patti Hagemeyer was disappointed with the outcome of the Louisville game.

"We just didn't play very well," Hagemeyer said. "We thought we had won after the second game."

Hagemeyer said the team stopped fighting hard and that is when Louisville took over the game.

"Athletics doesn't work that way," Hagemeyer said. "You don't think you've won until you do so."

The Salukis dropped the final three matches due to Louisville's Laurie Maxwell who scored 23 kills and Shannon Miseck who made 19 kills against the Salukis.

Hagemeyer said the team is lacking in consistency and in its whole approach to the game.

"We've got to be more consistent," Hagemeyer said. "We've got four more games until the Gateway Conference. We've got to get it together."

Hagemeyer had a grueling practice planned Sunday night for the players, but would not comment on exactly what she would focus on during the practice.

Of the 13 service aces the Salukis made against Louisville, five were scored by senior outside hitter Amy Johnson and three were made by junior outside hitter Lori Simpson.

The Salukis won the first two matches with the help of 12 kills from junior outside hitter Debbie Briscoe and sophomore middle blocker Dana Olden. Freshman outside hitter Stephanie Liestner contributed with 10 kills.

Another Saluki standout was junior setter Martha Fimhaber who scored 15 digs. Simpson scored 17 digs against the Redbirds and Olden made seven blocks.

The Salukis will be in College Station, Texas Friday and Saturday for the Texas A&M Invitational.

Saluki women downed at Coors Invitational

By Jeff Bobo
Staff Writer

After advancing to the elimination bracket at the 1990 Coors Light Softball National Invitational Championship held this weekend at Western Illinois University, the Saluki women's softball team was knocked out of the tournament by Texas A&M by a score of 3-1 Sunday.

Texas A&M jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first inning off of losing Saluki pitcher, senior Lisa Robinson.

Both runs were the result of errors, as was Texas A&M's third run which was scored in the fifth inning.

"Lisa was pitching well and her ball had a lot of movement," Saluki women's softball pitching coach Gary Buckles said.

The winning pitcher for Texas A&M, Missi Young, only allowed two hits and one unearned run while throwing 12 strikeouts against SIU-C.

The only Saluki offense came from an RBI double off the bat of sophomore Colleen Holloway in the sixth inning, which scored junior Andrea Rudanovich.

Texas A&M went on to win the tournament, defeating Colorado State 5-1 in the finals. Young also earned the victory over Colorado State.

The Salukis opened the tournament Friday by defeating defending tournament champion Oklahoma State 2-1.

The score was tied 1-1 as the Salukis went to bat in the bottom of the seventh, but Rudanovich knocked in the game-winning run. Robinson earned the victory for SIU-C.

"Lisa was in control for the entire game," Buckles said. "When she got into trouble she made the good pitches and got out of it."

The Salukis finished the tournament with a record of 2-2, with their only other defeat coming Saturday at the hands of Eastern Michigan in a 1-0 heartbreaker.

Warsaw Pact representatives agree on sharing arms cuts

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (UPI) — Warsaw Pact negotiators reached a partial agreement Sunday on apportioning arms cuts the Soviet-led alliance accepted during talks with NATO on reducing conventional forces in Europe. The two military blocs have informally agreed on ceilings for different types of armaments during the Conventional Forces in Europe, or CFE, talks in Vienna, but it is up to each side to divide the cuts among its members. Warsaw Pact country representatives agreed on a formula for sharing reductions in aircraft and helicopters.

Violence in Gaza Strip after mob killing

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israeli politicians called Sunday for severe punishment, including widespread house demolitions and deportations, for residents of Bureij refugee camp, where an angry mob killed an Israeli reserve soldier. Bureij has been under curfew since Thursday when Sgt. Amnon Pomerantz was stoned and burned to death in his car. The refugee camp in the middle of the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip was quiet Sunday but violence broke out in the Jabalia refugee camp and the area of Khan Younis after mining workers said they were attacked.

Brady urges IMF to finance for gulf crises

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady urged International Monetary Fund leaders Sunday to "meet the economic challenges" of the Persian Gulf crisis by mobilizing to support the hardest-hit nations. Brady's comments to the IMF's policy-setting Interim Committee signaled that the U.S. administration is determined to use IMF and World Bank meetings this week to buttress opposition to Iraq's occupation of Kuwait. U.S. officials are drumming up greater assistance for the "front-line" states hurt by the U.N. economic embargo of Iraq.

World Bank works for environmental goals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Harshly criticized in the past for supporting Third World projects that harmed the environment, the World Bank in 1989-1990 sharply increased its loans for environmental improvement, the bank said Sunday. Presenting the World Bank's first environmental report, officials said the bank approved 11 loans totaling $404 million in the fiscal year ended June 30 for purely environmental projects. Only two such loans were approved in fiscal 1989, said Kenneth Piddington, the bank's environmental department director.

Titan 4 rocket grounded for unknown reasons

Fla. (UPI) — The predawn launch of an Air Force Titan 4 rocket carrying a secret military payload was grounded at the last minute Sunday for unknown reasons, sources said, raising the possibility of another try Monday. But Titan 4 flight preparations are conducted in secrecy and it was not immediately possible to confirm when another attempt might be made to launch the unmanned $173 million rocket on what would be only the program's third flight. At 3:30 a.m., the flight was called off, sources said, despite reports from a weather aircraft that conditions were "go."

Secretary of State receives IEA governor endorsement

United Press International

The Illinois Education Association Sunday announced its endorsement of Secretary of State Jim Edgar's bid for governor. In throwing its support behind the Republican candidate, the IEA cited Edgar's record as secretary of state and his commitment to education. "Jim Edgar has been a visionary, innovative secretary of state and he will bring those outstanding qualities to the governor's office," said IEA President Lee Betterman. "He has proven he matches his rhetoric with results and we look forward to working with him to meet the great educational challenges of the 1990s."

Ag students recruit for SIU-C

By Leslie Colp
Staff Writer

The College of Agriculture at SIU-C does more than send out form letters when it recruits students. It sends the Agassadors.

Agassadors are a group of 10 agriculture students who speak at high schools, community colleges and civic groups to recruit and to tell about the changing world of agriculture.

The Agassadors made between 60 and 70 visits to locations all over the state last year, said Donald M. Elkins, associate dean for instruction.

Brad Clark, a senior in agribusiness economics, benefited from a visit in 1987 when an Ag Ambassador came to his high school in Clay City.

"The Ag Ambassador's confidence impressed me," Clark said. "They (all Agassadors) have to have their stuff together."

The number of students in the College of Agriculture dropped from 1,170 students in 1977 to 627 students in 1986.

Enrollment figures for 1989 show an increase to 677 students, and another increase is expected in 1990. Elkins attributes much of this success to the Agassadors.

Agassadors are chosen based on academics, communication skills and their knowledge of agriculture at SIU-C.

"Our main goal is to keep students in agriculture," said Aaron Hager, a senior in plant and soil science and a two-year member of the Agassadors.

Elkins began the Ag Ambassador program at SIU-C in the fall semester of 1986 and currently serves as academic adviser.

It was modeled after a similar program at Texas Tech University in Lubbock.

"We've gotten better organized (since 1986)," said Les O'Dell, assistant dean for external affairs and coordinator of the Ag Ambassador program. "And the students are getting more involved."

O'Dell was one of the first Agassadors and now is in charge of training and arranging visits.

Students have many reasons for wanting to be an Ag Ambassador. Some enjoy telling other people about agriculture, while others simply want to give something back to the College of Agriculture.

"I like meeting new people," said Jerid Wendling, a junior in general agriculture and a first-year Ag Ambassador.

About 25 to 30 students apply each year to be an Ag Ambassador, Elkins said.

Applicants are required to have at least a 2.5 grade point average before submitting an application and going through an interview.

The interview lasts about 15 to 20 minutes and is conducted by agriculture faculty members and a staff member from the Office of New Student Admissions.

"Some of it can be pretty intense," Hager said.

By the time the training is over, the Agassadors are able to answer almost any question about the College of Agriculture and SIU-C, Elkins said.

CSO concert showcases strings, new director

By Melynda Findlay
Staff Writer

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra wrapped up its Illinois tour in style Friday night.

Carbondale was the final stop in the orchestra's tour of downstate Illinois. Governor Jim Thompson made a special appearance at the concert to declare Oct. 1990 to Oct. 1991 the Year of the Orchestra in Illinois.

If you missed the sold-out concert, run to your phone and call this number: (312) 435-8122.

Good. Now while you've got those folks at Chicago's Orchestra Hall on the phone, order tickets for a concert during their upcoming Centennial season. It will be worth every penny.

Friday's concert opened strongly with "Don Juan," Richard Strauss' musical depiction of the legendary lover.

The second piece was the exciting and playful tone poem "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks."

A tone poem is a piece of music that tells a story.

The highlight of the concert was the final piece "Don Quixote," based on the literary creation of Spanish writer Miguel de Cervantes. It featured principal cellist John Sharp and principal violist Charles Pikler as soloists. Quixote's adventures are presented through ten variations on the main themes of the piece.

Sharp's solos represented the legendary dreamer, Don Quixote.

His playing of this rather demanding piece was remarkable. I only wish there would have been a long cadenza to showcase his incredible talent.

The viola solos represented country bumpkin Sancho Panza. Pikler's playing also was without disappointment.

One thing I found strange, however, was that Pikler wasn't featured as a performer in the same way Sharp was. Sharp sat in front of the orchestra while Pikler remained in his own chair within the orchestra.

Perhaps it was because Sharp was portraying the main character of the piece; perhaps it was due to the space limitations that occur when a 110 piece orchestra is put onto a stage the size of Shryock's.

Conductor Daniel Barenboim, who will assume the responsibilities of musical director in September 1991, did a wonderful job Friday night.

He showed an exciting interpretation of the scores and was fascinating to watch as well. He was energetic and very engrossed in the music.

USG hopefuls get a second chance

IT HAS BEEN SMOOTH sailing in the Undergraduate Student Government waters lately, but there may be a storm brewing on the horizon.

Yes, it's almost election time again.

The elections last year revealed just how immature most of our presidential candidates were.

After weeks of name-calling, nasty note-writing, backstabbing and general discontent among members, USG was still unable to elect a presidential party.

IN THE MIDST of the incessant squabbling, the real issues were lost. But now the presidential hopefuls have a chance to redeem themselves in October.

Things have been running smoothly this semester with Cheryl Santner at the helm. Issues such as the keg registration and insurance premium refunds were addressed. But perhaps the biggest step in the right direction came when the USG threw out all the old members of the election commission and put in new ones.

THE ELECTION COMMISSION is charged with the task of overseeing the election and making sure voting and campaigning run smoothly and according to the rules.

The commission sure didn't do this last year, but then again, the candidates weren't exactly the pillar of maturity.

The slate has been wiped clean. USG has another shot at trying to elect a mature, responsible presidential party.

Let's hope it can be done right this time, for the sake of the students.

Symbol of patriotism

THE MOVING WALL has traveled on, but the memories remain.

The Patriot's Bravo Company, a group of Murphysboro veterans dedicated to preserving the memory of those who served in Vietnam, worked for two years to bring the wall to the area.

The work paid off in the tremendous response of 35,000 to 40,000 people who visited the wall. The response signifies that the war that some people tried to forget deserves our attention today.

Many people will never get the chance to visit the Vietnam Veteran's Memorial in Washington, but everyone in the area had the opportunity to visit the moving wall.

The replica of the wall that travels to people is the best way to remind people of a conflict that must not be forgotten.

THE HEALING PROCESS for veterans and their families continued as many gathered in small groups to pray or place flowers or letters in memory along the wall.

The 2 1/2 year waiting list for the wall signifies that America has accepted what the monument stands for and that the Vietnam veterans deserve our respect and recognition.

Perhaps Sgt. Major Bobby Pruett of SIU-Army ROTC summed up the feelings best when he said, "Patriotism is coming back, and I hope it continues. You can just reach out and feel the spirit of the wall coming through these people."

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board. Letters to the editor must be submitted directly to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 500 words. Letters fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department. Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Nader returns as crusader for consumers amid criticism

By Leon Daniel
 UPI Chief Correspondent

RALPH NADER admits he ate a sugar-loaded ice cream bar, but the uncompromising consumer advocate claims he was entrapped.

Vanity Fair, a glitzy upscale magazine, leveled the shocking charge in a hard-hitting article on Nader, who is fighting back manfully.

A heretofore unyielding foe of refined sugar, Nader countered that the magazine's reporter set him up by buying him the ice cream bar.

A NOTORIOUSLY frugal man, Nader presumably figured he had no choice but to ingest the killer bar before it melted.

Digging mercilessly for even more dirt, Vanity Fair also disclosed that Nader recently ate a hard candy that contained a red dye he has branded as unhealthy.

Caught red-handed and therefore unable to deny such decadence, Nader explained that his throat was parched and the hard candy was the only thing within reach.

FORBES, A MAGAZINE

avored by corporate fat cats, joined the attack with a cover story titled "Ralph Nader Inc.," which described its subject as a hypocritical empire builder.

All the silly sniping at him notwithstanding, Nader is on a roll after almost disappearing from public view during the 1980s, otherwise known as the Greed Decade.

THE LANKY LAWYER who wears cheap duds is highly visible again, tilting at Washington's windmills and slaying corporate dragons.

Life magazine got it right when it named Nader this summer as one of this century's most influential Americans.

The nation's top crusader on behalf of consumers is a muckraking monastic who rose to national fame in 1965 by taking on America's powerful and then unregulated automakers.

NADER'S LEGENDARY campaign against an industry that put style and profits ahead of safety led to its regulation and creation of an agency to recall unsafe cars.

The times beg for a resurgence of Nader's Raiders, who could be the shock troops of the current grassroots rebellion that has incumbent pols and corporate crooks quaking in their Guccis.

THERE IS A groundswell of sentiment out there in the real world beyond Washington for throwing rascals out of political office and putting greedy miscreants behind bars.

As the consummate outsider, Nader looks like a natural to ride hell for leather at the head of the posse forming to bring the insiders to justice.

AFTER ALL, IT WAS Nader who blew the loudest whistle last year when lawmakers on Capitol Hill were plotting their notorious salary heist.

He led the successful fight against the greedy proposal to raise congressional salaries by 51 percent and still fights to repeal a smaller pay grab approved by the lawmakers.

Nader is a likely hero to the increasing hordes of Americans who are mad as hell and aren't going to take it any more.

Campus boycott of Nike advocated for not investing in Afro-Americans

The main purpose of a university is to inform and to educate. In my quest for the proverbial "A," I seem to have become removed from the events of the day.

Recently, my sister, who is 13, chastised me for wearing a product being boycotted by Operation PUSH.

Today, the issues dictate that all Americans and I no longer support Nike.

Nike does not have Afro-American executives.

Nike does not use Afro-American advertisers. Nike does not invest in the Afro-American community.

Why is this important? It has been said that more than 30 percent of Nike's profits are from Afro-Americans.

While there can be no doubt that Nike's profits have increased due in part to famous Afro-American athletes, there is also no doubt that Nike should increase employment of Afro-Americans in high level positions.

There have been portrayals of PUSH, the proponents of the boycott, as extortionists.

I think not. Spike Lee's "Do the Right Thing" raised similar issues.

Just as Nike has the freedom not to invest in the Afro-American community, PUSH and the Afro-American community have the right not to invest in Nike.

This is not a violent attempt to invoke change at the end of a gun barrel. Boycott is not extortion.

It is freedom not to support those who practice unfair business practices.

If you are like me you may, in addition to owning 10 pair of Nike athletic shoes, own Nike shirts, shorts or sweats.

No, I will not be throwing them away. Let's be realistic. However, I will buy no more until Nike has changed its position.

Furthermore, I would ask everyone who might happen to wear their Nike paraphernalia, to cover over the Nike insignia with tape or a reasonable facsimile.

Therefore, after this letter, I expect to see a whole lot of tape on Nike gear in the Student Recreation Center.

Now that I have been briefed on the issues, I have acquired a responsibility to act. Now that you know, it is your responsibility to act.

Let's do the right thing.—Derek Burrell, graduate student in public affairs.

statistics for parents and students to look at are rapes, sexual assaults, break-ins and burglaries at the campus and surrounding areas. He said campus crime statistics should be released but he doesn't believe it will provide parents and students with a clear crime picture.

"One of the big problems with this bill is that it doesn't look at the on-campus picture," Harris said. "A lot happens off campus. If I were going to be sending my daughter to the University of Illinois, I'd want to know how many sexual assaults there were in Champaign County, not just on campus."

"The SIU-Campus is a lot safer than off-campus. If there are four rapes reported on the SIU-Campus this year, I can guarantee you there would be twice that number more reported down town. The difference is the University police are concentrated in a much smaller area. In addition, we've got 30 Saluki patrolmen who walk the campus."

Dave Stricklin, press secretary for Poshard's Washington office, said the Senate version of the bill calls for universities and colleges to provide statistics on crimes against students compiled from reports regardless of where the crime occurred.

Poshard said he doesn't think a university or college should be held responsible for reporting crimes involving students if the crime took place while the student is no where near the school.

"What if a female student goes to Florida for spring break and gets raped?" Poshard said. "Should the school be held responsible for reporting that rape?"

Carbondale Police Lt. Tom Busch said "Departments are supposed to report crime that takes place in their area of responsibility. We can't start defining who lives here permanently and who doesn't and who screws up in Carbondale and who screws up in Florida on spring break. That's not the point of reporting crime."

"What would it do for local law enforcement agencies if an SIU-C student was a crime victim in Florida," Busch said. "We have no responsibility or authority in Florida and there would be no sensible purpose in reflecting that in our stats."

The House version of the bill calls for universities and colleges to provide statistics on crimes against students only where the crime occurs on campus or in a university controlled situation, Stricklin said.

Although Poshard doesn't think a school should be held responsible for crimes against students that occur away from the school, he does think crimes that occur in the metropolitan area directly surrounding a school should be reported.

Poshard said he hopes he is appointed onto the conference committee, made up of House and Senate members, which will iron out the dispute. Before the bill goes before the President.

"If I'm appointed to the committee I'm going to try and mold the bill to cover not just campus crime but the crime in the area around the campus, which might include a whole city or even an entire county," he said.

Backers of the pending legislation have suggested that schools be required to mail information to all prospective students who request enrollment information.

exchange rate. Before the invasion, a single Kuwaiti dinar was worth almost 12 Iraqi dinars.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said in an interview with an American television network that the newest statement from Iraq was "not very helpful to those who want a peaceful solution to the problem."

Perez de Cuellar also said he was planning to meet with "many actors in the present drama," including Aziz, and that he would support a U.N. peacekeeping force in the region.

The U.N. secretary general said an air embargo against Iraq would probably be approved within a few days.

INA said Aziz sent a letter of protest to Perez de Cuellar because the United States had denied permission for his plane to land in New York. It said Aziz had wanted to participate in the debate over the proposed air embargo.

The State Department said it had "no information" on Aziz's charge.

Baker scoffed Sunday at what he called "twenty-twenty hindsight" after the Iraqi embassy in Washington released the transcript of a July 25 meeting between Saddam and the U.S. ambassador in which he seemed to warn of the impending invasion.

Ambassador April Glaspie told

Saddam during the meeting that Washington was concerned about the buildup of Iraqi troops near the Kuwaiti border but was not taking sides in the dispute.

Some analysts have said the United States appeared to give Iraq the green light to invade, a contention Baker sharply denied.

In Tehran, Iranian President Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani said at a banquet for Syrian President Hafez Assad that Iran is steadfast in its opposition to the U.S.-led multinational military force in the gulf, calling it an "arrogant scheme," according to a report Sunday by the Iranian news agency IRNA.

Baghdad Saturday night.

One English wife who left her terminally ill husband in Baghdad said the British government had failed those like her.

"The American consulate has brought the sick out, Italians, French. What's happening here? Why can't we get our terminally ill and elderly people out?" she asked.

A spokesman for the Kuwait task force at the State Department in Washington said its unconfirmed estimates showed 1,145 U.S. citizens remain in Kuwait and 320 in Iraq.

He said those remaining are believed to be mostly male. Iraq, after its Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait provoked a U.S.-led military buildup in Saudi Arabia, said it intended to hold Westerners in Iraq and Kuwait and to create a human shield around key military and other installations.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein later relented and said that women and children would be allowed to go. A State Department official said that some 1,700 American citizens, mostly women and children, and foreign relatives have been airlifted out of Baghdad on U.S.-chartered flights since then. Most U.S. men have been detained.

In all, 2,500 Americans are believed to have fled the two Persian Gulf countries by various means since Iraq invaded Kuwait.

Officials believe there are still more than 1,000 Americans, mostly men, either in hiding or being held prisoner in both countries.

Most of the 184 on Saturday's flight to London had been in hiding in Kuwait before applying to be on the evacuation flight.

the Washington Monument and was greeted by Secretary of State James Baker.

Posing briefly for photographers, de Klerk was asked what he was seeking from his visit. "Friendship," he replied.

On his arrival, De Klerk declared "the new South Africa is at hand" and promised the "walls of apartheid are coming down."

Asked whether he was seeking solutions to his nation's problems of apartheid and political divisions, he said, "I'm going to be giving information about the solutions we're making."

As for whether he would make a bid for a lifting of the U.S. economic sanctions against South Africa to prod that country to end its white minority rule, he replied: "I didn't come here with a shopping list."

De Klerk and Baker rode together to the nearby Blair House, the president's guest house across the street from the White House where the South African leader will reside during his stay.

He planned to attend church services at the National Presbyterian Church and make the rounds of the Washington monuments before going to Vice President Dan Quayle's residence for dinner.

against Iraq fails to force the Iraqis from Kuwait and the administration decides to take military action, the newspaper said.

Among the most sensitive facets of the plan is the requirement that the Bush administration secure attack corridors through Turkey and Jordan, which border Iraq on the north and west, to open fronts against the Iraqi army and dilute the combat strength of its ground forces, the Post said.

Opening these fronts would relieve pressure from any landing by U.S. Marines and armored assaults by the Army and multinational combat troops.

A strategy for opening multiple fronts against Saddam is also an attempt to exploit the weaknesses of Iraq's military supply system, the newspaper said.

"Their supply system is not geared to mobile operations or to project power," a military analyst told the Post.

Debaters argue to octafinal finish

By Natalie Boehme
Staff Writer

SIU-C debaters returned from the J.E. Wright Invitational at Oklahoma Christian University in true SIU-C debate style.

Out of the 38 teams that participated in the junior division tournament, all four SIU-C teams reached the octafinal rounds, which constitutes the top 16 teams.

The highest ranking SIU-C team, composed of Pete Hoogerwoerd and Marcy Marlowe, placed second in the tournament. In the octafinal rounds, Hoogerwoerd and Marlowe beat teams from Pepperdine, Kansas State, and Central State University 3-0 to secure their position in the final round. The team lost the final round to a Kansas State team with a score of 0-3.

Wayne Basinger and Dave Romanelli were the second SIU-C team to place in the tournament, coming in fourth place. The other two SIU-C teams, composed of Brian Donner and Thad Ryan, and Amy Katz and Ken Rhude, tied for fifth place.

Two SIU-C debaters ranked in the special division: of speaker quality points which are given for outstanding speaking abilities during a debate. Marcy Marlowe, who is in her first semester of debating for SIU-C, placed second in speaker quality points and Thad Ryan placed fourth.

Terry West, assistant coach for the debate team, said by winning 75 percent of their rounds, the team definitely started the season off on the right foot.

"I think there is a tendency to be disappointed when you are in the finals and don't win it all, but we have a lot to be proud of," West said.

Cancer risk drops with annual tests

WASHINGTON (UPI) — About 17 percent of colorectal cancer cases among elderly Americans could be prevented if they underwent a relatively simple screening test every year, a congressional report said Sunday.

The Office of Technology Assessment estimated that an annual test for hidden blood in the stool would prevent about 23,000 cases of colorectal cancer in the 2.1 million people who are currently age 65 or older.

Each year, about 110,000 people age 65 or older are diagnosed with colorectal cancer. As people age, their risk of such cancer increases.

The screening procedure, called fecal occult blood tests, reduces cancer cases by allowing doctors to detect polyps in the colon before the flap-like growths turn cancerous. Such tests also cut down on deaths by catching colon cancer in its earlier, treatable stages.

On the down side, the OTA cautioned colorectal screening could prove to be an expensive venture for Medicare, which currently does not pay for such tests. Fecal occult blood tests would cost the federally run program, which covers much of the health costs of most elderly people, an extra $1.5 billion, or $700 per person, over the lifespan of those elderly people, analysts said.

"While costs often are intimidating, we cannot forget the important trade-offs of longer life expectancy, additional productivity and, of course, improved quality of life," said Rep. Rod Chandler, R-Wash., who earlier this year introduced legislation to provide Medicare coverage for colorectal screening.

The fecal occult blood test costs only about $4, but OTA analysts factored follow-up tests and the removal of polyps into the overall cost of the screening effort.

Only about one-third of people age 60 or older surveyed in 1987 said they had ever undergone a fecal occult blood test.

About 7 percent said they had undergone a proctoscopy, another method of colorectal screening that involves inserting a tube with a light on the end into the intestine.

Minority recruiting on campus gets good marks

By Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

Three Chicago senators visit SIU-C to look at minority issues

The University received good marks from three state legislators for its efforts in recruiting minority students, the chancellor's executive assistant for external relations said.

Sen. Miguel del Valle, Rep. Robert LeFlore Jr., and Rep. Anthony L. Young, who are all democrats from Chicago, were on campus Tuesday by invitation of Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit.

Besides the recruitment of students, faculty, staff and administrators, retention and athletics were also some of the minority concerns discussed, Garrett L. Deakin, executive assistant for external affairs, said.

"We are attempting to make them (legislators) more aware of what we are doing," Deakin said. "They are quite satisfied."

Some of the lawmaker's concerns were about efforts the University will put forth to improve existing programs, he said.

"One of the changes will deal with the issue of awareness," Deakin said. "The University has 77 different minority programs. We need to make people aware of them. That is a strong concern."

"The overall opinion was that we are doing a good job. But we have a ways to go," he said.

During a tour of campus the legislators took the time to talk with black and hispanic students, he said.

"Many of the students expressed an interest in a course in race relations," Deakin said. "This comes from the concern that students from an inner-city room with students who have not been around minorities."

Recruiting was a major issue, he said.

"We get statistics," Deakin said. "But what do they really mean?"

That is one of the questions that led the Chancellor to invite the legislators, he said.

"We thought, let's get them down here to see what they would do," Deakin said.

No other state college has a higher rating for recruiting black people, he said.

During a meeting in the University's New Student Admission Services the legislators talked with recruiters who work in the Chicago area, he said.

"Westinghouse, Semian, the legislators would name schools in their districts to see what recruiting the University was doing," Deakin said. "They were surprised at how much we are doing with the schools."

Part of the afternoon was spent in a meeting with administrators including Benjamin A. Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs and research.

"There were no new concerns brought up in the meeting," Shepherd said. "We remain committed to the recruitment of women and minorities."

While the University has been putting out strong efforts in retention, better job offers took five Ph.D. minority faculty members, he said.

"Last year was a bad year in retaining minority faculty," Shepherd said. "All five left for better jobs."

Four of these minority faculty members taught courses, he said.

"The University offered counter offers, but they did not accept them," Shepherd said.

Recruitment standards need to be improved, he said.

"There will be a larger and larger percentage of minority students coming to the University," Shepherd said. "Unless this number is decreased significantly we need to recruit better quality students."

Among the efforts to recruit better quality students are the Minority Engineering Program and graduate scholarships including the Illinois Minority Improvement Program and the Illinois College Equal Opportunity Program, he said.

"These programs have been very helpful in attracting minorities and women," Shepherd said.

"With everything we do it's never quite enough. We want to do more."

At the top of the priority list is retention of students, he said.

"The legislators were receptive to our efforts," Shepherd said. "They indicated they also expected that we would do more."

He said he felt the legislators enjoyed their visit.

"It raised their level of awareness of what the University is doing," Shepherd said. "They left with a much improved image of the University."

SIU-C's efforts may look like they are all aimed toward blacks, but the need is based upon the number of people in each minority group, he said.

The population of minorities is ranked by majority as black, hispanic and native American, he said.

Five masterpieces recovered

French police arrest man who stole portraits from the Louvre

PARIS (UPI) — French police said Sunday they had recovered five masterpieces stolen from Paris museums this summer, including a work by Renoir that was cut from its frame at the Louvre during visiting hours.

Police charged Richard Etoh-Mvondo, a 21-year-old Frenchman, with the theft of five master paintings and a small 15th century statue and said he was also responsible for the disappearance of a 1470 portrait of Dodge Francesco Foscari by Venetian painter Lazzaro Bastiani from a Venice museum last Friday.

Etoh-Mvondo was arrested Saturday night at his home in an elegant neighborhood of the French capital and confessed he had stolen the five paintings in July as well as a 15th century wooden statue that had disappeared at an earlier date.

He told police the works were hidden in Lyon, 460 km southeast of Paris, according to sources close to the investigation.

Police said Etoh-Mvondo admitted he had cut out Renoir's "Portrait d'une femme Assise," "Portrait of a seated woman," with a sharp knife from its frame at the Louvre during visiting hours last July 4.

Etoh-Mvondo used the same method later that day to remove "Portrait de Monaluccia" by Ernest Hebert from the Paris museum bearing the artist's name.

"Portrait of a seated woman," which measures only 14 by 10.8 inches, was cut from its canvas as tourists milled around the room where it was being exhibited. Embarrassed officials admitted at the time that an alarm installed to protect the painting had failed to function.

Jacques Sellois, Director of Museums of France, said after the incident that he would introduce new security technology in French museums and ordered five small museums in Paris closed to individual visitors.

Sellois, who had been in his job only five weeks at the time the Renoir and Hebert paintings disappeared, said some rooms at the Louvre and other large museums such as the Gare d'Orsay, where the Impressionist masterpieces are on display, might be closed if security was found to be deficient.

Bush requests cut in budget by Oct. 1

UJAMSVILLE, Md. (UPI) — President Bush expressed optimism Sunday that budget summit negotiators will agree on a new deficit-cutting budget before the Oct. 1 deadline, Gov. William Donald Schaefer disclosed.

Schaefer told reporters that he voiced concern to Bush that failure to reach agreement would force automatic furloughs of thousands of federal workers in his state and said Bush is hopeful that an agreement can be reached.

"He was not pessimistic. He was right optimistic," Schaefer told reporters. He conferred with Bush after the president completed a round of golf at the Holly Hills Country Club near Frederick, Md.

Schaefer quoted the president as saying, "I am optimistic that we'll get a deal." The governor said that Bush then added, "I hope it is a good one."

Schaefer drove to the golf course from a wine festival to speak to the president about the budget crunch after hearing that Bush was spending the afternoon playing golf at a nearby country club.

Schaefer said Bush told him the talks would be renewed soon.

"I'm worried about the budget deficit," Schaefer said. "We've got to have an agreement."

The governor noted that unless an agreement is reached by Oct. 1, automatic spending cuts would immediately go into effect including furloughs for thousands of federal employees.

Schaefer said this would cause "hard times for many people who live week-to-week."

Bush flew to the golf course from Camp David, where he was spending the weekend. He returned to the White House during mid-afternoon Sunday.

The remaining major stumbling block to an agreement is the administration's proposed 15 percent capital gains tax cut.

Senator plans to vote against Souter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Assistant Senate Democratic leader Alan Cranston of California, citing concerns about the nominee's abortion views, said Sunday he will vote against the confirmation of Judge David Souter to the Supreme Court.

In remarks prepared for delivery in the Senate Monday, Cranston became the first senator to announce he will oppose President Bush's choice to fill the vacancy created by the retirement of William Brennan, one of the court's liberal members.

"I cannot support a nominee who refuses to acknowledge that a woman's right to choose to terminate a pregnancy is a fundamental right or that the right of individuals, married or unmarried, to use contraceptives to prevent pregnancy is a matter of settled law," Cranston said.

"I cannot support a nominee who regards these issues as open questions," said Cranston, who is the author of an abortion rights bill pending in the Senate.

Souter, 51, a federal appeals court judge and former member of the New Hampshire Supreme Court, declined in his confirmation hearings to say how he might vote on cases challenging the landmark 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision, which recognized a constitutional right for women to seek abortions.

Souter said in Senate Judiciary Committee hearings last week, that he would come to the court with no preconceived agenda on abortion or Roe vs. Wade.

the game instead of the quarter," he said.

SIU 21 - Illinois 7.

Nervous beads of sweat were forming on the brows of Illini fans. The Salukis dream quarter was over.

Then Griffith stepped out of the phone booth, wearing No. 29 instead of a big "S". He was the Illini Superman on this Saturday afternoon.

After a few sluggish drives by both the Salukis and the Illini, Illinois head coach John Mackovic yanked Verduzco for sophomore quarterback Jeff Kenny. Kenny did little more than handoff to Griffith.

Verduzco, however, was anything but inspirational to his teammates. He sat on the bench alone for the remainder of the game. He did not even congratulate Griffith when he scored his eighth touchdown.

Griffith took a handoff at the Illinois 49-yard line and ran untouched for a 51-yard score. Before halftime, Griffith ran in two more touchdowns to bring his total to four and giving the Illini a 28-21 lead.

"I was praying that our defense could hold them," Smith said. "But that was not the case."

The Saluki defense was beginning to be manhandled by the huge offensive line of the Illini, while the fierce pass rush of Illinois' Moe Gardner and Me. Agee was throwing a monkey wrench into the Salukis usually efficient passing attack, battling down a number of Downey passes.

"The line did a great job," Downey said, "but I had to realize I was facing guys that were 6-foot-5, not 6-foot-1."

"Our kids were loose coming into the game," Smith said. "Then we got ahead by 14 points and I think our kids got excited. 'Oh my goodness. I'm ahead by 14 points. What do I do?' We hit a stretch where we were kind of in awe of ourselves. Then the dike broke."

Griffith ran around and past the worn down Saluki defense all through the third quarter on scoring touchdowns of 5, 18, 5 and 3 yards. In the process he broke a number of records and received a pair of standing ovations from the appreciative Illini crowd. In fact, the only thing Griffith didn't do in the game was walk on water and if Makovic wouldn't have taken him out for the fourth quarter, that might have been his next feat.

"We got real tired," Kilgallon said. "Their line outweighed us by a lot. We were high at the beginning and we came down. It's a game of highs and lows and the third quarter had a lot of lows."

With a number of sacks on Downey the Salukis could only tally 35 rushing yards on the day. Downey couldn't get on track in the air either as he finished with 16 completions in 36 attempts. There were a number of dropped balls and batted down passes to add to the Salukis second-half passing woes.

The only Saluki highlights of the second half were the return to the team by junior tailback Garrett Hines (20 rushing yards), the 48-yard kickoff return by Swain and a ferocious goal line stand by the Saluki defense late in the fourth quarter. Illinois had three cracks at the endzone from inside the 5-yard line, but the Dawg defenders wouldn't budge.

"Nothing but positive things can come from a game like this," said junior center Mark Francis. "We will come out better from this, offensively and defensively."

"It was fun," Smith said. "This whole week was fun. We'll be a better team because of this game."

As Francis walked up to Downey in the post-game interview room, he made a comment to his teammate that summed up the Salukis trip to Champaign.

"We scared 'em."

breaking day with a 51-yard TD run, that the U of I fans were waken from their deep slumber. A good thing for them, because they were missing a good football game.

Griffith went on to light up the scoreboard eight times to set NCAA records for the most points scored in a game (48) and the most touchdowns in a game (8). His name will forever be listed in record books above legends Red Grange and Jim Brown.

While Griffith was busy stealing the show in Memorial Stadium, Illini starting quarterback sophomore Jason Verduzco sat quietly on the bench after he failed to spark the U of I offense.

Verduzco was pulled by Illini coach John Mackovic in the second quarter and sat pointing on the sideline for the remainder of the game. Even when Griffith in planted his name in football history, Verduzco could only sit and ponder his failure. Verduzco never budged to congratulate his teammate or to root his team on.

After displaying great talent against Colorado the week before, the only thing Verduzco showed against SIU-C was his poor sportsmanship.

The Saluki defense not only crushed Verduzco's pride, but it completely shut down the Illini attack for nearly 20 minutes.

The Salukis have a lot to be proud of. They went into Saturday's ballgame with nothing to lose. They were 33 point underdogs and very few people were even giving them a chance to score. What a surprise it was when they came out fired up and gave the Fighting Illini something to sweat about.

THE NATIONAL COLLEGE NEWSPAPER

Are you ready for five years?

Fewer students graduate on time

By Kathy Youse
■ Kansas State Collegian
Kansas State U.

Universities across the nation are seeing a change in student attitudes concerning course loads and their commitment toward graduating in four years. The U. of Maryland, College Park, and North Carolina State U. are examples of schools struck hard by what's often tagged the "fifth-year senior syndrome." Far less than half the first-time freshmen at the Maryland campus graduate in four years; the probability of completing a bachelor's degree there in four years is 19 percent for males, 35 percent for females. On the North Carolina campus, barely more than half — 51 percent — of the students graduate in four years. According to U.S. Dept. of Education records, a 1980 national sample of more than 1,000 entering college freshmen indicated that 22 percent graduated within 4.5 years; a similar survey conducted in 1972 showed that 31 percent graduated within the same time.

The reasons

Institutional research departments at Texas Tech U. and the U. of Missouri both have correlated students' longer stays in college and what they call the "lazy" student attitude: a reluctance to enter the working world, legitimized by extending the college career.

However, Mike Lynch, a member of Kansas State U.'s institutional advancement staff, doesn't think laziness is the root of the problem. Instead, he points to the fact that students have more distractions than ever before.

The most commonly cited reason for this "conservative approach" toward college is the need for students to work while still in school. And it applies to both traditional students and non-traditionals.

Tom Nauman, who works at the institutional research office at the U. of Colorado, has noticed older students entering college with more responsibilities, including families and jobs. They

A bill already passed by the U.S. House of Representatives and expected to pass the Senate this fall may require universities across the nation to publish campus crime statistics and other previously "protected" information.

The bill also requires colleges to disclose the financial reports of its athletic departments and the graduation rates of athletes, as well as all other students.

Tuition climbs (and so do students)

A tuition hike that went into effect this fall at Arizona

State U. inspired yet another student protest. But this time the demonstrators took to the trees.

Late last spring, following an announcement by ASU officials that tuition there would rise, a group of eight art students saw an opportunity to make a statement that was hard not to hear, er, see.

The students of Professor Jim White's three-dimensional design class cellophanned themselves to palm trees along the school's University Drive to "illustrate the economic plight of students."

And to make sure they wouldn't go unnoticed, the protester-artists elevated themselves about four feet into the air on stacks of textbooks.

National averages for this year's fee increases haven't been released, but several surveys of major public schools indicate that students are paying 8.5 percent more to go to school this year than last year.

Meanwhile, the general inflation rate is about 5 percent.

Student discovers 'plasma' technique

Martz operates equipment in Los Alamos lab.

Humankind never will succeed in putting the radioactive genie back into its bottle. But a U. of California, Berkeley, graduate student may have found a way to clean up some kinds of radioactive waste created whenever plutonium, the fuel used in nuclear power reactors and weapons, is processed and handled.

Joseph C. Martz, a 24-year-old graduate student in chemical engineering, has used a technique called plasma processing to extract plutonium from low-level radioactive waste.

In the plasma-processing technique, plasma is created by sending electrical energy into a reactive gas.

The plasma then produces atomic fluorine atoms, which combine with pluto-

Ban lifted on T-shirts

The U. of Nebraska, Lincoln, will allow a pro-choice student group to sell or give away T-shirts on campus that are imprinted with religious connotations despite a ban on the shirts by the school's Affirmative Action official.

The shirts, which were being sold in the student union during the spring term, read: "Rated PG, Papal Guidance Suggested" and "The Incredible Shrinking Woman's Right to Choose."

Richard Wood, vice president and general counsel of the university system, determined late last spring that the words printed on the shirts were protected language under the First Amendment.

But just days earlier, UNL's Affirmative Action Officer Brad Munn banned the shirts, stating in a press release, "If pamphlets were being passed out, the words would be tolerated. But displaying the shirt and vending it on University of Nebraska, Lincoln, property can be seen as degrading and humiliating to many Roman Catholics and others."

Munn said he banned the shirts because union booths used by student groups are owned and operated by the university. He said therefore he believed the university had the right to decide what could be sold or distributed at the booths.

Munn said his concern was not with that particular shirt, sold by Students for Choice, but with the possible ramifications of a policy that might allow similar, more offensive shirts to be sold.

"I'm concerned when the shirt says 'Kill all Jews,'" Munn said.

The "funeral" procession makes its way down a campus street. Below: Jacoy Frazier plays the deceased's friend.

Mock funeral 'rapes' emotions

By Holly Raver
■ The Ball State Daily News
Ball State U.

Religious leaders and school officials at Ball State U., like those elsewhere, continually search for ways of making messages about the dangers of drunk driving hit home.

And with their latest attempt — a mock funeral for a fictitious BSU student supposedly killed as the result of her drunk driving — they might just have found what they are looking for.

But the editorial board of the school's student newspaper, The Ball State Daily News, said the administration went too far to illustrate their point. The funeral for contrived student Jamie Path was conducted at the end of April, just before the school's Bike-a-Thon Weekend, an annual spring festival. Anna Lamb, alcohol education coordinator at the school, said the project's purpose was to remind students to drink responsibly at celebrations such as Bike-a-Thon and graduation parties.

Members of the funeral procession — including Lamb, the Rev. Charles Gilbert of the Baptist House and Dean of Students Don Mikesell — carried Path's coffin across campus streets, capturing students' attention as they walked to class.

A 45-minute service followed, during which Gilbert's eulogy jerked tears in Jacoy Frazier, a student who played the part of the "deceased" girl's friend.

Students passing by stopped at the open coffin to view Path's body — a mannequin normally used by students for practice in cardiopulmonary resuscitation. But not all the students got close enough to see that the body was not real, the paper's editorial claimed.

Prior to the service, Gilbert said he had never given a sermon for an imaginary dead person. "I normally like to talk positively about the deceased," he said. "But in Jamie's case, that really isn't possible."

Instead, he directed his sermon at all those still alive, using Lamb as an example of how not to live.

"Hopefully, the students can find some purpose and meaning in Jamie's death," he said.

The Daily News later criticized Lamb and the others' efforts, calling the funeral "a sensationalized approach aimed at getting real human reaction to a false happening, (thereby) raping those bystanders of their emotions."

The paper also criticized the event, which was staged just days before a student actually died in a traffic accident, because "some students honestly thought (the mock funeral) was real."

Longer

can only commit themselves to part-time class schedules, he said. Part-time students usually take less than 12 hours, or four courses, a semester.

"I have to work to pay for my living expenses," said K-State student Laura Porter. "My tuition is paid, but it's still a lot of money for the rest of my bills."

But for some students, staying in school longer means a better education, which translates, they hope, into better jobs.

"I am staying longer to take additional marketing and computer courses," said Kim Engroff, another K-State student. "I decided it would be best to do it now, even if it meant staying an extra semester."

Non-prep programs: Help or hindrance?

Another factor administrators cite as leading to students staying in school longer is that they continue to enter college without knowing what to declare as their major.

This could be a backlash from the encouragement colleges nationwide have been giving students, by offering "non-preference programs," to wait until they are certain of what academic avenue they want to travel before declaring a major.

However, administrators at participating schools, including the U. of Arizona, say they tout their non-preference programs because of the high number of times students change their majors before graduation, ultimately keeping them in school longer.

At UA, the average student changes his major 2.3 times before ever getting a diploma, said Dean Beresciani, who works in the Office of Undergraduate Admissions.

Blaming the College

Still, some believe other factors blamed on college administrations — the "publish-or-perish philosophy," campus climates that isolate students, teachers who can't teach — are at the heart of the problem.

Roger McIntire, associate dean of undergraduate studies at the U. of Maryland, College Park, admitted that his school struggles "with two reputations, the national and local reputations." The school's national identity is created by its research, the local identity by its teaching.

"Undergraduate education always loses," said Maynard Mack, an English professor who helps devise ways to improve the school's curriculum.

Strain on Schools

Cynthia Flynn, who works in the Dean of Students Office at Oregon State U., said the school is losing federal and state funding because fewer full-time students are enrolled.

She said the decrease in funding is putting a strain on faculty and campus services, which are provided to all students, not just full-timers.

Kay Caballero, a Texas Tech institutional research staffer, said many students seem unconcerned. "Students who are not paying for college tend to take advantage of staying another year."

K-State student Maureen Mahoney agrees. "I really don't care that I have to go another year," she said. "I don't pay for it, and my parents can afford to send me the extra time."

Ivan Penn, The Diamondback, U. of Maryland, College Park, and Heather Harrel, Technician, North Carolina State U., contributed to this story.

nium to create the heaviest known gas, plutonium hexafluoride. This gas evaporates, taking the plutonium with it.

Martz's process may be applicable in separating the radioactive material from tools such as wrenches, clothing and other items exposed to low levels of radioactivity.

According to U.S. Department of Energy records, its facilities produced 1.6 million cubic feet of low-level radioactive waste in 1989.

Though it is several years away from practical application, the plasma-processing technique is significant because it may lead to "an economical way to decontaminate low-level waste without creating any new waste," said Del Harbur, division leader for nuclear materials technology at the Los Alamos (Calif.) Laboratory.

Plasma processing has been widely used for more than 15 years in the semiconductor industry to etch information onto computer chips, Martz is the first scientist to apply the technique to plutonium.

City cracks down on cramped student rentals

ALAN GIBSON, THE UNION, CALIFORNIA STATE U., LONG BEACH

By Andrea Budnick
■ State News
Michigan State U.

The grass has not been mowed since the snow melted. The illegal kitty cat missed the litter box. And the house licensed for four tenants is occupied by six students trying to make their rent cheaper.

Situations like this one are causing East Lansing, Mich., officials to increase enforcement of ordinances aimed at cracking down on landlords whose apartments are over-occupied by hundreds of Michigan State U. students who sleep crammed into every nook and cranny of low-budget dwellings near campus.

The city's concern: fire hazards.

Meanwhile, neighborhood housing association leaders are trying to force landlords to keep their lawns mowed, yards landscaped and windows clean, among other things.

The neighborhood associations' concern: community property values.

The city's worries are exemplified by a May 1987 tragedy, in which 23-year-old Paul Charles died when a fire ripped through his apartment shared by eight men. Charles was asleep in the closet he used as a bedroom.

Last year, the city issued about 20 citations to landowners of over-occupied rental properties, and City Housing Director Nick Thomas vowed to double the amount of the fine for violations from $250 to $500.

One of the tickets was issued to a landlord of a six-tenant rental occupied by eight students. Another was given to the owner of a five-person rental occupied by eight men trying make their rent about $200 a month.

Stanford U.: Coed by bed

By Jill Sporleder
■ The Stanford Daily
Stanford U.

While students at some single-sex schools protest the idea of allowing members of the other sex even into the same classroom, 12 students at Stanford U. shared bedrooms with opposite-sex hallmates for a week, giving new meaning to the word "coed."

It started near the close of the spring semester, when senior Mark Warren wrote a note on his resident assistant's message board on the third floor of Burbank Hall, asking if people would want to have coed roommates.

"I was so surprised, I didn't expect anyone to respond, but a whole bunch of people did," he said.

Third-floor RA Lara Salamacha was intrigued by the idea, so she sent around a survey, asking the residents if they really wanted to do a roommate swap. Indeed, six males and six females did.

The students got to choose their roommates, but Salamacha made it clear that only platonic friends should participate. Daily routines, such as changing clothes, turned into logistical problems for the new roommates.

"It takes some adjusting attitude-wise," junior John Reid observed. "You can't come walking into the room in your underwear."

Most of the participants cited interesting late-night discussions as one of the chief benefits of the experiment.

Although they enjoyed the temporary liberty, most participants were skeptical about the possibility of a university policy allowing coed roommates on a regular basis.

"If you opened it up as a widespread policy, the first people to request coed rooms would be boyfriends and girlfriends."

Two friends who wanted to live together would feel intimidated because the stereotype would be placed on them," Alison McCaffree speculated.

The participants interviewed agreed the swap was a positive experience and advocated trying it as an experiment in other dorms.

"It's a really good experiment," Reid said. "If it were up to me now, Carrol could be my roommate for the rest of the year."

Questions raised after cross taken down

By Nicole Carroll
■ State Press
Arizona State U.

For students and religious leaders at Arizona State U., a court's ruling to remove a cross from atop a campus chapel has taken the symbol out of sight. But not out of mind.

Campus Christians and others wonder what consequences the Maricopa County Superior Court's separation of church and state ruling will have on other religious symbols and expressions this fall.

The controversial cross that stood on top of the campus' Danforth Chapel for 40 years was removed quickly and quietly early one morning, seemingly ending more than six months of debate and protest.

But community members who later protested the action — also claiming the time of the cross's removal was purposely not made public — were loud in their disapproval of the cross's demise.

"Whatever you think is religious (on campus), let's get rid of it," said Andrew Cosentino, director of Citizens Against Religious Hypocrisy on Campus, a 1,000-member group of activists. "If one (religious symbol) goes, they all should go."

Out of sight
(but not mind):

A judge ordered that this cross, atop a chapel at Arizona State U. for 40 years, be removed, signaling uncertainty for all religious icons on that campus — and possibly others.

SCOTT TROYANOS,
STATE PRESS, ARIZONA STATE U.

Cosentino said he is encouraging students to call the Arizona chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union — the petitioner of the successful suit filed against the university's board of regents — to protest other religious symbols on campus.

He said kachina figures on a water fountain near the school's Language and Literature Building, an Indian ritual mural in the Administration Building and symbols near the entrance to Hayden Library that have been linked to Shintuism all should be targeted.

He also said his group is considering legal action.

The ACLU filed a lawsuit last fall against the school's former Interim President Richard Peck and the Arizona Board of Regents, calling for the cross's removal on the grounds that its presence was a violation of the U.S. Constitution, which ensures separation of church and state.

After the judge delivered his decision, he allowed two Christian campus groups several months to file an appeal, but both groups said they could not afford the legal costs.

The symbol has been relegated to a storage space in the university archives building, but some members of the university community say they would like to see it put on public display. Others would like to see it used for its original purpose somewhere off campus.

"If they're going to keep it boxed up, they should give it to someone who needs it," said senior Dan Martin, one of the students who defended the 5-foot by 3-foot, sheet-metal cross during the legal battle.

Susie Richardson, a member of Campus Crusade for Christ, said she would like to see the symbol displayed. "(But) if it's not on top of the chapel, I don't think it makes much of a difference one way or another," she said.

Program to help Greeks 'survive'

By Ann Marie Williams
■ The Daily Iowan
U. of Iowa

When 10 recognized experts on Greek issues anchor the first-ever national teleconference aimed at the troubled state of Greek life on Sept. 30, there will be plenty to talk about.

"The Power of Caring: Greek Life Will Survive the '90s" will link 150 Greek systems and address a range of topics of concern to Greeks and non-Greeks — values and ethics, alcohol and drug abuse, community building, hazing, multi-culturalism, and date rape. Organizers say the biggest goal of the teleconference is to set an agenda for the '90s.

Since 1978, about 50 students have been killed and hundreds injured as a result of hazing incidents across the country.

Those and other grim incidents have led to the passage or consideration of laws in all 50 states. The focus of the bills: to crack down on Greeks.

This "anti-Greek legislation," coupled with lawsuits that have closed chapter doors and forced changes in hundred-year-old traditions — namely pledge programs — have Greek leaders at every level worried about the future.

Concern about hazing was one of the catalysts for conducting the teleconference, said Mary Peterson, a U. of Iowa Greek adviser and a featured speaker of the program.

Accusations of racism and elitism also have plagued Greek systems, causing national leaders, local advisers and individual chapters to aggressively establish programs to educate members on countering such problems.

Last fall, the faculty at Bucknell U. in Pennsylvania voted to abolish all Greek organizations, blaming them for promoting "racism, sexism, elitism and anti-intellectualism."

U.'s new editors begin fellowships

Four recent college editors began nine-month fellowships this summer at U. The National College Newspaper, which is based in Santa Monica, Calif.

They are responsible for selecting and editing stories, photographs and graphics from more than 350 U.S. college newspapers for reprint in U., and they will direct and write special reports for spring publication. They were chosen on the basis of their reporting, writing, editing, layout and design skills.

■ Jennifer Bialow, a Tulane U. graduate, served as news editor of The Tulane Hallelujah and as a correspondent for the New Orleans Times-Picayune. In addition, the Florida resident interned two summers at the St. Petersburg Times and the Clearwater Sun. A mass communications major, Bialow won a 1989 Women in Communications Award from the New Orleans chapter and graduated Phi Beta Kappa in May.

■ A senior journalism and graphic communications major at California Polytechnic State U., San Luis Obispo, Doug DiFranco was editor-in-chief of the Mustang Daily last summer and for the 1990 spring quarter. Last year, DiFranco was vice president for special projects of the California Intercollegiate Press Association. He has won awards for feature writing, art reviews and page design.

■ Sonya Goodwin, a Northern Arizona U. graduate, edited the feature section of The Lumberjack for two years at NAU and served as interim editor last summer at the Upper Rogue Independent, a weekly newspaper in southern Oregon. She won awards for feature writing and page design through the Rocky Mountain Collegiate Press Association, and a Gold Circle Award for feature writing from the Columbia Scholastic Press Association.

■ Ron Koch, a May graduate of Indiana State U., was editor-in-chief of ISU's student paper, The Indiana

Statesman, for two semesters. He also was a part-time reporter and photographer for the Terre Haute (Ind.) Tribune-Star for two years, and served professional internships at The Tribune-Star and South Bend (Ind.) Tribune. Koch has been honored by the Indiana Collegiate Press Association with awards in news writing, investigative reporting, editorial writing, page design and photography.

Applications are available for the July 1991 to March 1992 fellowship program. U. Editors must have senior status by September 1991 or a recent bachelor's degree, and a minimum of two years of student newspaper experience, including one year as an editor. Applications are available from newspaper advisers or editors, or from Jacki Hampton, managing editor, U. The National College Newspaper, 311C Main St., Santa Monica, Calif. 90405 (213) 450-2921. The application deadline is Feb. 11, 1991, and recipients will be announced by March 4, 1991.

And if colleges choose not to comply with the mandates of the likely law, they could risk losing all federal funding.

Lee Ellis, senior vice president for business and finance at Northwestern, said expenses are not the only problem with the bill. "I think it's a dumb piece of legislation that's going to make a lot of work and not going to produce any light," he said.

If any light is shed by the statistics, it could be obscured by "hidden crime," or by crime that occurs off — but very near — campuses. The bill only requires reporting on-campus crimes, likely misrepresenting the actual safety of a college and its environment.

Still, Mary Beth Hawkinson, associate director of the school's Women's Center, said she thought the bill should be passed and Northwestern should have to make the statistics available for nationwide publication.

"I think it's a very appropriately titled bill — the student-right-to-know act," Hawkinson said. "Students do have a right to know about the place they will be living."

The bill will be voted on before the current congressional session ends on Oct. 5.

In addition to efforts to toughen up on violators of already existing ordinances, the city and neighborhood housing leaders have been pushing for the passage of a housing code overhaul that's been in the works for more than two years.

The landlords, in turn, have started their own group that opposes the possible new code. They also want to make sure rooms legal to live in now stay that way, and they want to see provisions in the proposal to help them cope with rising costs caused by its higher standards.

Frat finds charter . . . Lost for more than eight years, the original Kappa Sigma charter of the Lambda Iota chapter at Arkansas College recently was found and returned to the fraternity, according to Wes Faith, the fraternity president. Believed lost forever, the charter was discovered by a Batesville, Ark., resident in a one-liter Sprite bottle on the bank of the White River and returned to an alumnus. The fraternity plans to frame the damaged charter to preserve the character it gained on its journey, Faith said. ■ Len Rayburn, The Arkansas College Highlander, Arkansas College

CALIFORNIA

Student jailed for computer fraud . . . Albert R. Braden, a former student senator at California State U., Sacramento, was sentenced to three years in state prison for possessing $18,000 in computer equipment that he fraudulently billed to the university. Braden also was required to pay $10,000 in damages, a judgement which may be reduced if he can prove he surrendered some of the stolen property to police. According to court records, Braden used an alias and a false CSUS purchasing number to have the equipment shipped to his home. He was arrested Jan. 9 when sheriff's officers, investigating complaints from three electronics companies, entered his home and found the stolen equipment. Although the judge called the situation "sad" because of Braden's potential, he said the premeditated and serious nature of Braden's criminal activity called for the maximum sentence. Braden graduated from CSUS in 1989. As a student senator, he helped start Students Against Fraud in Education (SAFE), whose members sought the repeal of a $13 student fee increase. ■ Russ Buettner, The Hornet, California State U., Sacramento

DELAWARE

And the dish ran away with the spoon . . . Everyone knows dishes and spoons can't run away. Or can they? At the U. of Delaware, with an estimated $50,000 worth of kitchen utensils reported missing each year, people are starting to question where the flatware has gone. William G. Stewart, coordinator of facilities renovations and equipment for Dining Services, said the dishes are not lost, but sitting in dormitory rooms on campus. "I understand that people like water glasses as opposed to paper (cups) in the morning when they brush their teeth, but if each student takes a glass from the dining hall, we will face a substantial depletion of goods, having a direct reflection on our operating budget," Stewart said. One student attempted to justify his actions by saying, "Whether I need it or not, I always steal silverware when I am unsatisfied with my meal." ■ Shana Teitelbaum, The Review, U. of Delaware

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

A house fit for a president . . . The purchase of a $1.1 million four-bedroom, two-story brick house for Howard U. President Franklyn G. Jenifer sparked a debate among students and faculty about the appropriateness of the university's newest acquisition. "If they treated the students the way they treated the president, this school would be better off," student Thomas Pierre said. While some students vehemently disagreed with the purchase, others simply questioned the basis of the university's decision. "I feel that those funds could be put to better use," sophomore Mark Colbert said, citing renovation of the dormitories as an example. Others, however, said they thought the purchase was necessary. Roger Estep, vice president for development and university relations, said the house was purchased with the intention that it be the permanent home for the university's future presidents. ■ Duane Covert, The Hilltop, Howard U.

GEORGIA

Kissing frogs brings no prince, but . . . Students at the U. of Georgia are talking about a bizarre new drug phenomenon that is hopping into the nation: toad-licking. Large, warted toads are being imported to the United States from South America to combat various agricultural pests, and curious drug users have found a way to get high from licking the heads of these amphibians. Most toads release toxins from the back of their heads as a defense mechanism against predators. Toad-licking has been compared to glue-sniffing, which also is said to create a euphoric sensation. University Police Chief Chuck Horton doesn't see how the practice could be a drug-related offense. The toads haven't posed a problem for campus officials so far. He said, "You'd hope a college education would prevent something like that." ■ Gwinn Bruns, The Red and Black, U. of Georgia

LOUISIANA

"Ouuuch!" . . . The residential life office at Loyola U. issued a memo to students concerning an incident in which an improperly disposed hypodermic needle pricked a housekeeping person. The main risk involved with the needles is the exposed blood, according to Gloria Johnson, a nurse at Hotel Dieu Hospital. "It is very risky because of the many infections that the needle may have on it," she said. The memo stated that disposed needles should be in capped metal or puncture-resistant, clearly marked plastic containers. Injuries of physical plant workers by syringes have been reported at other universities, including Eastern Kentucky U. ■ Charlie Brown, The Loyola Maroon, Loyola U.

COMMENT AND OPINION

When AIDS became our brother

By Ramsey Brisueno
■ The Retriever
U. of Maryland,
Baltimore County

It was, of course, inevitable. The phone rang like it always did. I reached for it, not knowing that particular call was the one I should have let ring off the hook. The usual chitchat was omitted; the only part I still hear, mostly during a sleepless night, is the voice of Peter telling me that he was diagnosed as positive.

That was seven doctors, five hospitals and three moves ago. We lost track of the nights made longer by the hate that threatened to consume my brother as much as this disease was consuming him. I now wasn't just his brother; that job had become obsolete around the second attack of pneumonia and the glaucoma that began taking over his right eye. Nurse, maid, whipping boy, martyr, protector — just a few of the titles I now held in this mindset thrown on me, on Peter. The disease shredding through Peter's body seemed to want as many people as possible to know it was there — it wouldn't be ignored.

AIDS has become our other brother. We know him so well now that the little tricks he plays on Peter don't surprise us as much as they used to. The night sweats make Peter's nights unbearable at times, and his hands claw at the soaked sheets. By the time morning comes, we have changed the sheets three times. The sheets need to be specially washed to get rid of any germs. If only we could wash this unwelcome brother away as easily as we change the sheets.

ANDREW HARDING, MUSTANG DAILY, CALIFORNIA POLYTECHNIC STATE U., SAN LUIS OBISPO

My older brother Peter has become the one who needs a big brother to fight off the bullies, to come into the school yard and punch the lights out of the creeps who made fun of him for being different.

Even then I should have known I was to be his martyr. Peter never tried to hide his being what he was and I never asked him to be any different. He was my All-American, my Flash Gordon and my Einstein — all rolled into one 5-foot captain of the debate and wrestling teams and occasional honor student who happened to be my gay brother. I took the taunts, the insults; I could take anything. Peter would protect me as always, we were inseparable. Times have changed only slightly.

The muscular body that made many an opponent submit on the wrestling mat seems to drown now amongst the sheets of the bed. He has become so thin, and his hair is falling out. This was the result of a trip to Mexico and the purchase of some drugs that were not in vogue with the Surgeon General's list of AIDS treatments. Experimental medicines are handed out there like lollipops at the barber shop.

Peter is one of the lucky ones who has someone to be with him. Others, a multitude of young and aged faces we pass in the waiting room, have to make it on what little help they can get, or until they run out of insurance money, whichever comes first. Each visit I try to force myself not to notice who isn't there. It never works; the faces flow in my head and I try desperately to always picture Peter's face in the waiting room.

I turn Peter over to change the bed pan and find yet another sore beginning to open.

Pus oozes over the tender pink flesh, but I don't even flinch. Yesterday's sore is there, so is the one from the day before. I diligently wash the gummy liquid away and place a fresh gauze on it. I think of algebra, to numb myself. Algebra is just as gross, as Peter would tell me. Peter numbs himself with his humor. I don't think either really works, but we play our roles.

Peter amazes me. Despite the infections in his throat, the diarrhea, the loss of vision in his right eye, he still has the ability to think positively and feel some hope. I just feel my brother. Early on in the disease, Peter told me if he felt he wouldn't die, he could wait until he was ready. He wants to live. True to my big brother's words, he only got worse, but didn't leave.

In moments with myself, I allow myself to feel fear. I must mask it from Peter; he wants to live. I wish I could say

Destruction of symbols detrimental to history

By Junhong Hannah Wu
■ The Observer
U. of Notre Dame

Mongolians are removing statues of Stalin. The Hungarians broke a statue of Lenin into pieces. Elsewhere in the Communist world, similar things are happening, and people cheer wholeheartedly for these exciting "historic" moves.

Every time I see such scenes, I wish I had the power to stop the people from taking such "Leninist actions." I want to ask them what they are trying to do, change history or forget it?

It seems quite obvious that we can neither change nor forget our history. We can only learn from it. While not everyone agrees with the practices of Lenin, Stalin or Mao, none of us can deny that they have made history — a history we cannot afford to forget. It is a history we must let future generations know about ... and remember.

Like flags, statues are symbols. However, unlike burning flags, destroying historical statues is not simply a matter of going away with that which can be mass-produced. It is a deeply regretful gesture. With the fervor of people tearing down painful reminders in their history, such as the Berlin Wall, I wonder how many of these statues remain. Probably not many at all.

In my hometown in the northeast of China stands one of the largest monuments ever erected to Mao. I had pictures taken there when I was a little kid.

Someday, I hope to show these pictures to my children and grandchildren, who will have only a small clue about these things. But I would rather take them there and tell them about this unforgettable part of their history. That is, if the statue is still standing.

STUDENT OPINION POLL
1-800-662-5511

Is it a violation of the First Amendment to regulate music and art for obscenity?

RESPONSES TO MARCH AND APRIL U. POLLS

In the March issue of U., we asked readers for their views on abortion. Do they consider themselves pro-choice, pro-life or something else? Sixty-five percent of the respondents considered themselves pro-choice, 34 percent said they were pro-life and 1 percent did not place themselves in either category.

In the April issue of U., students were asked their views on funding of campus gay and lesbian groups. Sixty-seven percent felt student fees should not be used to fund gay and lesbian groups, while 33 percent said the groups should receive student funding.

First Year

Now, Apply By Phone for a Chase Visa or MasterCard®

Now you can apply for the most popular card on campus simply by calling the Chase Information Center™ at 1-800-AT-CHASE. Just call toll free, 24 hours a day, any day, and we'll take your application over the phone. Immediately. (Unlike other credit card companies who only mail you their application.)

We believe that students are among the most responsible users of our cards. So we've created a unique credit card program specifically designed for students to make applying even easier. There's no need for a previous credit history, a minimum income, or a cosignature from your parents.

And best of all, you'll be applying for a Chase credit card with no fee the first year—a substantial savings compared to other cards.

With a Chase credit card, you could enjoy advantages like...

Protection for Virtually Everything You Buy—with the Chase Merchandise Protection Plan™. Doubles the manufacturer's U.S. warranty up to an additional year on nearly all purchases made with your Chase credit card. (And protect almost every purchase in the event of loss, theft, damage or fire, in excess of other applicable insurance, for up to 90 days!*)

Flexible Monthly Payments—unlike American Express® which makes you pay in full each month.

Worldwide Acceptance—at nearly 7 million locations.

Immediate Savings—since your first year's fee is free. (And considerably less expensive than the $20 to $55 annual fee other cards charge.)

It may never be this easy again to apply for a Chase Visa or MasterCard. So call the Chase Information Center now.

'Batman' combats campus evils

By Jannette Bush

■ Daily Nebraskan

U. of Nebraska, Lincoln

Students at the U. of Nebraska, Lincoln, need no longer fear - Batman is here.

Sophomore Bill Miller, that is. Known for doing things out of the ordinary, Miller is two different people. He is a student by day, Batman by night.

The 5-foot-10-inch hero in black has been spotted inside residence halls and fraternity houses, and outside in parking lots at night, according to residents.

"I am a totally different person in a mask," he said. "I become part of the night."

After seeing the movie "Batman," Miller said he was inspired by the caped crusader's policy of giving everyone a fair chance.

The movie convinced Miller to buy a Batman costume and apply Batman's school of thought to his everyday life.

"When I see someone doing wrong, I want to scare them into doing right," he said.

He also just wanted to do something different.

Miller said he thought it would be "neat" to get the outfit and showboat with it.

The first time he donned the $200 costume and returned to the town where he attended high school, Miller

Struggling to be recognized

By Corey Davis

■ Stanford Daily

Stanford U.

Poet Audre Lord said "Love and speak with courage, with the knowledge that we were never meant to survive." Black people. Gay people. We were never meant to survive.

I have a story to tell.

My story is about courage and knowledge and survival. If I didn't tell my story, don't you know that I would die?

I have a story to tell and I'm going to tell it the way I want to tell it. And I'm going to use my own language. (Z snap!)

My story is the story of Bigger Thomas, Pecola, Walter Lee and Clay Williams. Of being a "nigger," "tar baby," "spook," and an "Uncle Tom." Of being a shade too dark and a little too nappy-headed. Of being perceived as ugly because I didn't have blonde hair and blue eyes.

My story is the one told by Rosa Parks, Sojourner Truth, Harriet Tubman, Crispus Attucks, Frederick Douglass, Martin Luther King Jr., Malcolm X, Marcus Garvey, Fanny Lou Hamer and countless other Black folks that didn't make the history books.

My story is enriched by the stories of the beautiful and courageous Black gays and lesbians who've gone before me, including James Baldwin, Alvin Ailey, Patrick Kelley, Pat Parker, Joseph Beam, Ma' Rainey, Bessie Smith, Bayard Rustin, Gladys Bentley and countless others who have been closeted by time and custom.

My story is about a history and culture so beautiful and powerful that it can't be captured by a lowercase "b." About a history and culture that is constantly being appropriated by white America, while at the same time I am told I don't have a history or culture.

My story is about a journey. A personal and cultural journey I never thought I would survive. A story of alienation, desperation and planned suicide attempts. A story of not being Black enough, and then being too Black, and finally becoming

Practical jokes crack up campus

By April Hefner

■ The Breeze

James Madison U.

Putting Vaseline on doorknobs and Kool-Aid in showerheads are two favorite activities of many James Madison U. students.

As the fall semester begins, the entire campus feels the pressure of academics and the urge for fun. And these paradoxical emotions often combine into the favorite sport of many — practical jokes.

"I do it to relieve stress, and it helps to expand your imagination," said senior Jonathan Brumfield. "It's a challenge to come up with new ways of getting people."

One of the most common and well-

More students becoming active in their religions

By Brook Williams

■ The Review

U. of Delaware

More students nationwide are "keeping the faith" and becoming involved with their religions while pursuing their educations, according to experts of various religious denominations.

Increasing student religious involvement is caused by such influences as peer pressure, a search for a sense of community and a reevaluation of priorities, experts said.

"The more people are educated, the more likely they are to be involved in a church," said Douglass Taber, faculty adviser for the student association of the Mormon Church at the U. of Delaware.

Taber, also an associate professor of chemistry and biochemistry, explained, "You would expect less-educated people to be more religious, but it's the exact opposite."

Many students, however, do not rediscover their faith immediately upon entering college.

BRIEFLY STATED

Maple leaf rag . . . Leaf playing is not a method fortune tellers use to read tea leaves. It's a musical art form practiced by Teik Kiang Goh, a Chinese graduate student in plant pathology at the U. of Georgia. Goh, who learned to play leaves from a friend when he was 17, said acquiring the art was difficult, and he practiced many hours to perfect his technique. To play a leaf, Goh puts it on his top lip and blows, he said. "Your lips control the notes and sound. It's similar to whistling." Goh said he plays tunes the audience can hum along with, including "Oh, Susannah" and "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star." He said, "Leaf playing isn't representative of any country. It is merely an interesting skill that I want to share with others." To make his performances more interesting, Goh also plays requests, mimics people in the audience and accompanies a pianist. Goh usually brings an extra branch on stage, "so if I make a mistake I'll have other selections." ■ Charlotte Shelton, The Red and Black, U. of Georgia

Counting curses . . . In his spare time, North Adams State College psychology professor Tim Jay visits movie theaters and counts the number of obscenities in the movies. The Massachusetts educator uses the data to study the effects of profanity on society. The movie "Eddie Murphy: Raw" checked in as the top obscene movie with a curse word every 10 seconds. Spike Lee's "Do The Right Thing" was a close second with an average of one profanity every 15 seconds. For comparison, Jay charted movies not regarded as highly profane. "E.T." blurts out a curse word every eight minutes, and the classic "Gone With the Wind" has only a single obscenity during the entire film. ■ David Hallock, The Cavalier Daily, U. of Virginia ing comfortable with who and what I am.

My story is about love and happiness. About a man loving, wanting and needing another man. Of two men sharing mind, body and soul. About kisses and hugs from Michael.

My story is about fear. About late-night death threats. Of scared "men" threatening to kill me. Of losing old friends. Of not being able to make new ones. Of growing tired to the point where I don't care anymore.

My story is about living in a world that is divided between black and white. About Bensonhurst, Howard Beach and South Africa. About "First Worlds" and "Third Worlds." Of wondering if Black people will ever be free.

My story is about making new friends. Of not having to play white to be liked. Of being Black to the fullest degree. Of trying to build a truly multicultural society that is based on respect for differences in race, religion, sex and sexual orientation.

That is my story and I wanna thank y'all for letting me share it with you.

Dr. Seuss club accepts 'sneeches' of all kinds

By Darren Garnick

■ The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
U. of Massachusetts, Amherst

Two U. of Massachusetts, Amherst, students are looking for people who love green eggs and ham.

Juniors Christl Hansman and Betsy Flack, founders of the UMass Dr. Seuss Club, said they want to honor the celebrated children's author through parties and group readings. Currently, the club has 37 members.

Dr. Seuss is the pen name of Theodore Seuss Geisel, author of more than 40 books, including "The Cat in the Hat," "How the Grinch Stole Christmas," "Green Eggs and Ham" and this year's "Oh, the Places You'll Go!"

"Just about anyone can quote Dr. Seuss," Flack said. "He is a symbol of our generation. I don't think I know anyone who hasn't grown up on his books.

"The stories seem so simple, but they're really not," she said.

Hansman noted that several Seuss works are political allegories for social change. These include "The Lorax" (environmental conservation), "Bartholomew and the Oobleck" (toxic waste), "The Butter Battle Book" (nuclear arms race), "Horton Hears a Who" (social equality) and "Yertle the Turtle" (power and exploitation).

"We hope to be a kind of activist voice," Hansman said. "But we also are doing this for our own self-enjoyment. We love Dr. Seuss."

Among the "fun stuff" Hansman and Flack have planned for club members are Dr. Seuss costume parties, animated films, a "Green Eggs and Ham" brunch

(the meal was doused with green food coloring) and a writing workshop.

"We want to create a team of people to write Dr. Seuss style editorials for newspapers and (draw) editorial cartoons, like a star-bellied sneech with a Ronald Reagan head," Flack said.

"If we can get people at different schools to form their own clubs, we can have a national Dr. Seuss convention at his house," Flack said. "Maybe we can camp out on his lawn."

According to Flack, her brother is co-president of the Dr. Seuss Mutual Appreciation Club at Bard College in Annandale, N.Y. Dr. Seuss wrote a letter to her brother endorsing the club.

"Dr. Seuss and the Bard club mutually appreciate each other," Flack said. "We haven't gotten that far yet, but we hope someday he will appreciate us too."

Assassination Game turns students into 'psychopaths'

By Amy Davoux

■ The Daily Iowan
U. of Iowa

For 104 U. of Iowa students, murder has become the name of the game.

Living on the run has become a way of life in Hillcrest Residence Hall since the beginning of The Assassination Game, a game of survival in which participants try to "kill" their victims before getting killed themselves.

Initially, each assassin receives a dart gun complete with two rubber-tipped suction darts, an assignment card with the name of their first victim and a death certificate to be handed over to the killer in the event of a murder.

"The assignment cards give residents the name of who they are after, and if they kill their victim they get their victim's assassination card," said Resident Assistant Beth Blocks, one of the game's coordinators. "Then in the end, when there are only two people left, they will be after each other."

"The game is real hard as long as people keep silent," sophomore Brian Mannlein said. "When names get out as to who's gotten who, it gets easier."

Demonstrating patience in his pursuit was sophomore Erik Jarvi, who spent an estimated 10 hours outside Mannlein's door attempting to kill him.

Yet sophomore Tisha Lake said she saw stranger happenings.

"I actually saw girls doing their homework in the bathroom because their assassins were waiting outside," she said.

"This game is a riot — it's turned me into a total psychopath," student Rachel Pizer said. "I won't open my door. I'm never like that. I actually call my neighbors when people knock at my door and ask them to check if they have a gun."

Student 'paints' portraits using unique medium

By Chad Wagner

■ The Ball State Daily News
Ball State U.

Neal Taylor, a fourth year journalism student at Ball State U., is developing a unique style of artistic expression which celebrates famous Hoosiers.

Taylor makes portraits of famous Indiana residents from tiny magazine clippings. He calls his work Media Art.

Taylor's creations include portraits of Larry Bird, Jim Davis, Bob Greise, Michael Jackson, Bobby Knight, David Letterman, John Cougar Mellencamp, Dan Quayle and Red Skelton. Five of the pictures are autographed, and Taylor is contacting the other subjects for their signatures.

Taylor began his art form as a high school senior in Evansville, Ind., under the direction of John Siau, a sports artist.

Taylor designed a portrait of New York Yankees first baseman Don Mattingly, also a native of Evansville. It was the winning entry in the Evansville Press Youth Art Awards.

Taylor plans to have a collection of 15 portraits when finished. The entire assembly will be titled "Indiana Legends."

Jokes

known pranks involves pouring baby powder beneath an unsuspecting individual's door, and then using a hairdryer to blow a fine, white mist into the room.

Although the smoky atmosphere only requires a few moments to create, it may take weeks before the powder fully clears from the room.

Other well-known pranks include sending victims on hunts after the mythical "snipe" animal and a warm-water treatment to induce bed-wetting while the victim is asleep.

Junior Dave Nelson told of another animal prank where two chickens were put in his suitcases' room as they slept. With the lights out and the door held shut by the instigators, the victims had no way to discover what creatures were causing the commotion.

"I try to put myself in the other person's shoes. If the joke really wouldn't bother me, then I'd go ahead with it," said student Mark Hughes.

"If it involves property damage or extensive cleanup, you don't do it."

Batman

said he witnessed an unjust scene from atop a one-story building he was perched on. He said he saw a teen-age boy being attacked by three others.

Miller said he jumped off the building onto one of the attacker's backs and knocked him down. He said he threw another attacker a few feet and pulled the last one to the ground.

Surprised by the black cape, mask, Batman costume and the stun gun Miller was carrying, the attackers stood and looked at Miller "in awe," he said. He then helped the victim to his feet and walked him home.

When not stalking bad guys, Miller said he likes to move from building to building with the help of a wire. He and a friend attach the wire between buildings, and Miller slides across the gap.

Miller keeps his hands wrapped in tape to protect them from being burned as he slides down the wire.

Many people look shocked when they see him out at night, he said, but he feels secure because the mask protects him from being identified.

Miller said his parents aren't aware of his Batman escapades. "They probably wouldn't understand," Miller said. "They would say, 'He has been watching too many movies.'"

Playin' the pipes

MICHAEL WILLIAMS, THE DAILY IOWAN, U. OF IOWA

U. of Iowa student Paul Delouherie practices his love, the bagpipes, on Union Field. Delouherie has been playing the bagpipes since he was about 10 years old and is trying to debunk the myth that bagpipes are only for men in kilts on moors. He also teaches the pipes for the Scottish Highlanders, a bagpipe band at the university, and has recorded an album that mixes bagpipes with a rhythm and blues band.

Drama in classes illustrates study topics, promotes art

By Susan Izban

■ The Daily Illini
U. of Illinois

Setting aside time to absorb the arts may not be a high priority for university students already up to their necks in homework.

But a new program at the U. of Illinois brings performance art right into the classroom.

Aimed at trying to promote the awareness of culture and the arts, "Classroom Showcases" brings actors from the Krannert Center for the Performing Arts into classes, where they perform segments from their plays, concerts or operas.

Organizers said the program appears to be helping students discover the value of the arts in today's world of formulas, computers and routines.

The program, created and headed by Assistant Director of Marketing and Public Services Kathleen Stacy and Marketing Assistant Orli Rotem, appeals to students by relating some of Krannert's events to class material. To accomplish this, Rotem contacts instructors whose classes might benefit from a cultural performance. If the instructor approves, one class period is set aside for the showcase to be performed.

Stacy and Rotem first tried the program in an Asian mythology class, when a group from Krannert acted out a scene from "Kabuki Medea," a classic tragedy adapted to the Japanese theater form.

The program has proved successful, Rotem said, because it involves students in performances.

Student Jeff Johnson, who observed the performance of "Kabuki Medea" said he supports the idea behind the program.

"Culture is pretty much absent in today's society," Johnson said. "It is important to promote it now."

Blowing off steam

Chris Hernandez, Technical, North Carolina State U.
North Carolina State U. sophomore Mike Fehrer seeks refuge in the Free Expression Tunnel, where he often goes to play his saxophone. Fehrer said he finds that music "relieves him of 'boredom and loneliness . . . and pain.'"

Program unites music and psychology

By Garalyn Hall
■ The Red and Black
U. of Georgia

There's a unique field of study for students at the U. of Georgia whose interests range from music and psychology to education.

The new major, called music therapy, uses music to help change behavioral, physical and emotional conditions, said David Smith, assistant professor of music and undergraduate adviser to music therapy majors.

Music therapy can be used with psychiatric and mentally handicapped patients.

Obscenity?

Freedom?

Or both?

By David McGuire

■ The Daily Illini
U. of Illinois

So I go and buy "As Nasty As They Wanna Be" — the album by the rap group 2 Live Crew that has been declared "obscene" by a Florida judge — and what do I find?

It's pretty nasty, and by my standards (dare I say it?), obscene. But should it be forbidden fruit?

Because of U.S. District Judge Jose Gonzalez's ruling, a record store owner was arrested in June on an obscenity charge for selling the album. Two days later, two of the band's members were arrested on obscenity charges after performing the banned lyrics at an adults-only nightclub concert in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

Yeah, the album is a seemingly endless banter touching on all possible sexual subjects. But "pretty nasty" and "by my standards obscene" aside, 2 Live Crew should not be suppressed for their ridiculously crude and misogynistic perspective on human sexual activity. They should be ignored.

But because Judge Gonzalez has brought 2 Live Crew to national attention, the band and its music cannot be ignored. Forget record labeling; a real debate has surfaced with freedom of speech as its centerpiece. Hence, the Crew's new rap, "Banned in the U.S.A." Does selective prosecution of recording artists and record salesmen constitute an acceptable exception to the First Amendment?

Of course not. 2 Live Crew is an easy scapegoat for problems that stretch well beyond the scope of its lyrical outpourings. Rather than confront the degenerate social settings from which such attitudes emanate, "law-and-order" types would rather have us regard 2 Live Crew as boogymen for social problems whose roots go significantly deeper than rapped street rhymes.

As The New York Times editorialized, "Officials should hesitate before striking down, directly or indirectly, a cultural phenomenon they do not fully understand."

Are we to suppress 2 Live Crew for recording their desires? If we did, every porn magazine down to Playboy would have to go.

Freedom is not just a right — it's a responsibility. And part of that responsibility is to uphold the rights of people you would otherwise revile.

SOUNDBITES

Concrete Blonde
Bloodletting

Since emerging from the California sidewalks in 1986 with a remarkably good debut, Concrete Blonde has continued to impress critics, while somehow staying clear of mainstream notoriety. Bloodletting is the fourth release from the Los Angeles-based trio. On last year's Free, Concrete Blonde sounded very much like their name would suggest — tearing through the hard-edged, mile-a-minute pavement rock. Bloodletting, though, seems to represent a return to the emotionally charged lyrics the band started with. With Bloodletting, Concrete Blonde packs its biggest emotional wallop yet. ■ John Payne, Daily Nebraskan, U. of Nebraska, Lincoln

Modern English
Pillow Lips

On their latest album, Pillow Lips, Modern English makes a stab at some real changes, with mixed results. The band's first three albums established its distinctive sound, but with the loss of all but the vocals, Modern English has been forced to tamper with its sound. With Pillow Lips, Modern English attempts to forge ahead on the strengths of vocalist/guitarist Robbie Grey, bassist Mick Conroy and keyboardist Stephen Walker, the only original band members remaining. Although admirable, the band has lost some of the charm that made its early LPs so essential. ■ Brian Springer, The Daily Tar Heel, U. of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

Therapy

Senior Sherri Sizemore, president of the Music Therapy Club, said therapists can work with psychiatric patients to facilitate relaxation and help them express certain feelings they may not be able to share verbally.

For instance, hostility can be distinguished from docility by the way a person beats a drum or strums a guitar.

Centers for the mentally handicapped use songs, many written by therapists themselves, to teach people such things as safety rules and other basic skills, Smith said.

"I've always wanted to do something with music," said Debbie Klein, a sophomore in the program. "I also wanted to help people through counseling and special education."

Klein once worked in a nursing home where music was used to motivate the residents to participate in social activities.

Music therapy majors have the same basic requirements as music education majors, including biology and psychology classes, and specialization in an instrument or voice.

In addition, students must intern for six months after graduation to become registered music therapists.

Smith said income opportunities in music therapy are similar to those pursuing careers in education. Beginning at around $18,000 per year, salaries are generally higher in large metropolitan areas.

Religion

Donna Beede, who works with newly organized chapters of Campus Crusade for Christ, explained, "In the first year of college, students usually stop going to church, unless they start out as strong believers."

Freshmen are anxious to make their own decisions and experiment with new things, Beede said. "Independence has a lot to do with not going to church."

Sophomores and juniors begin to reevaluate their values and priorities and usually become involved during their senior year, Beede said.

Kathleen Corcoran, director of public relations for Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, said she thinks increased involvement results from a conservative political and religious movement.

Abusive childhood experiences also contribute to strengthened faith during college years, she said.

"More students are coming out of homes with alcohol and child abuse," Corcoran said. "These students are searching for a community, a place for healing."

She said research shows students are returning to their churches or synagogues, but the trend may vary across the United States. National statistics on student religious involvement are not available because the issue has not been thoroughly researched, she said.

U. of Delaware senior Kimberly Zitzner said she has noticed more students are attending mass now than when she arrived at the university.

Zitzner, a member of the Thomas More Oratory Roman Catholic student association, said services are tailored for the students, making them more appealing.

"The pastor directs his homilies toward the students," she said. "It's much more personal.

"Students listen to what he says to them and their values are strengthened. If they keep coming, it's because they want to, and for many, it's the first time they've had a choice about religion."

Pastor Bruce Davis of the Lutheran Campus Ministry said he noticed a similar rise in student church attendance.

"Students seem to be growing more traditional," Davis said, adding many students are moving away from the socializing and the peer pressure associated with the fraternity-sorority scene.

Rabbi Yosi Freidman of Lubavitch International in Brooklyn, N.Y., said Jewish students nationwide are participating more in Jewish campus organizations.

Freidman said reports from Chabad Houses, a Jewish student organization, also show a trend toward increased student involvement.

By Daniel Kelley
■ Indiana Daily Student
Indiana U., Bloomington

Responsible consumerism is becoming trendy.

Citizens finally are discovering the political power they have as consumers. Deciding what products to buy and what to leave on the shelves is becoming an effective way to make a political statement.

But can the consumer really make a difference? It seems as if everything we buy either hurts the environment or exploits people in some way.

Suppose you are a socially conscious person who wants to pick up some beer and munchies on Saturday night.

Your first test is deciding how you will get to the store. You decide to drive your car and grudgingly accept the fact that you will contribute to acid rain and the greenhouse effect.

On the way to the store, you have to get gas, an action that will mean giving money to an oil company. Which one will it be? Exxon is out because of their shameful cleanup efforts in Alaska. You decide on Shell, since they have a greener record than most, and try to forget their alleged involvement in South African apartheid.

At the store you face the dilemma of which beer to buy. You want to buy an American beer and help secure American jobs so you shy away from the import shelf. Coors Light is on special, but the Adolph Coors company has been accused by the AFL-CIO of discriminating against blacks, women and unions.

Miller Genuine Draft is a good beer, but their advertisements exploit women and treat them as sex objects. And to top it off, Miller is owned by the Philip Morris Tobacco Company.

So you end up buying a case of Huber. Their hands could be dirty too, but at least you don't know about it. Ignorance is bliss for the politically correct consumer.

Food is next. Meat is off-limits because it's too high on the food chain. Chicken looks good, but you

Alumnus gives students free home

It may be the best deal in town. The rent is free and so are the utilities. In fact, there are only two rules: pay for your own long-distance calls and no men above the first step to the second floor.

Four Auburn U. female students enjoy the hospitality of 79-year-old Auburn alumnus Charles F. Simmons, who started letting students live with him in 1986.

"My sisters and daughter told me I had to have someone stay with me or they'd put me in a home," said Simmons, whose wife died five years ago. "I was having some physical problems."

So Simmons called the financial aid office, and that winter a male student came to live with him.

"First they took over the den, then the kitchen and one refrigerator, then the washing machine, and now they've got all the parking."

—Charles F. Simmons,
Auburn U. alumnus

Since then, Simmons has had at least three women living at his house every quarter. He doesn't pick them out. The women already living there pick their own roommates.

"I don't want to force anybody on them," he said.

Simmons said the girls who live with him now have taken over the household. "First they took over the den, then the kitchen and one refrigerator, then the washing machine, and now they've got all the parking," he said, laughing.

Simmons used to have a $16 to $18 water bill, but now it is between $50 and $60. He said he also bought a VCR and had three cable packages installed for "my girls."

And for his girls, all of this is free.

"I'm not in the rental business," Simmons said.

In return, the students unload groceries from his car, occasionally drive him places and "are good company for dinner," he said.

"I don't impose on them," Simmons said. "I'd like to see them more than I do. None of them much like to study here. The telephone rings all the time, so they like to go somewhere where they

Inexpensive decorating not impossible

Students living on shoestring budgets often place decorating their apartments near the bottom of their priority lists.

But creating a personalized, livable environment does not require hundreds of dollars, said interior designer Cindy Walker.

She said all students need is a little greenery, a few pillows, inexpensive prints or posters, inspiration and creativity.

"Interior designing is like cosmetic surgery," Walker said. "You give your space a face lift for the least amount of money you can do it for."

Her first decoration rule for apartment dwellers is not to overcrowd or pack the place too full.

"Let the space breathe a little," she said.

Many apartments have brochures that can help students plan out available space, and Walker advises students to start their decorating with one of these plans, then add colors, textures, accessories and the finer points.

"When adding furniture, keep it in proportion to the room, and remember that not everything has to line the walls," Walker said. "But students must know when to say 'Stop, this is enough.'"

The worst thing people can do in an apartment is to degrade what they have done in the way of decorating, she said. "You create a dull environment by your attitude."

Interior designer Joe Hamm advises students to create an environment with themselves in mind, not for the approval of their friends.

Hamm advises students not to spend money on anything they cannot take with them when they leave. He also suggests asking parents, aunts and uncles for old dishes, pots and pans, ironing boards and irons, brooms, mops, and dustpans.

"Apartment living is really survival of the fittest," he said. "Have guts, and don't be afraid to beg."

There are many low-cost tricks students can use in decorating, Hamm said.

They can buy inexpensive mini-blinds and decorate them with paint. Sheets can become drapes or can be used as inexpensive throw covers for worn sofas and chairs.

Import stores carry hanging Japanese paper lanterns, and candles can be added for mood lighting. Pillows from import and discount stores can be used as furniture or decoration.

Hamm said students can make area rugs by using duct tape and thread to combine several remnants.

He said first-time decorators should visit large carpet stores and find out what happens to the old carpet taken out of businesses and residences.

Coffee cans in various pound sizes can be painted or covered in paper and used in the kitchen as canisters. Baby food jars make ideal spice jars, and the lids can be spray-painted to match the canisters, Hamm said.

For the bathroom, students can buy inexpensive shower curtains and brush on different lines of color with acrylic paint. Ribbons can be tied to the curtain hooks so they cascade down the curtain.

When hanging posters or prints, Hamm suggests rubber cement instead of tape to prevent pulling off paint or drywall.

"Put a small band of cement on the poster and one on the wall. When you take down the poster, a regular pencil eraser will usually take the cement off the wall," he said.

Framed pictures are a little different, however.

"Every hole students put in the wall must be filled. Use picture hooks because they leave finer holes that can later be filled in by putty sticks," Hamm said. "But glue hangers are bad because they pull the paint and drywall off."

Students should get permission before doing anything to alter the physical structure of an apartment, said William Jones, assistant director of the real estate department at Indiana U.-Purdue U., Indianapolis. After that, they can depend on creativity.

Frequent quizzes build learning power

By Marcie Bailey

■ The Daily Tar Heel

U. of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

Exams may be the most worrisome aspect of every student's educational career, but a recent Harvard U. study has concluded that students do best in courses that include quizzes, tests and oral exams as "check-points" for information retention.

The common belief that students receive higher grades in classes where they are left to study on their own with few tests or papers is a myth, according to the study. It also states that many students do better in classes when they study in small groups where they can sort out and discuss problems with peers.

Another method that encourages information retention is scheduling a quiz or discussion at the end of class, when students can ask questions and try to grasp the information as soon as possible.

Several professors at the U. of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, agreed that methods like these seemed to be helpful to students. Philosophy Professor Michael Resnik said he frequently quizzes his students.

"I think it helps in my particular course," he said. "It forces students to come to terms with the material right away."

The idea of bringing material back up at the end of class could be helpful, Resnik said, but he pointed out that students need to take some ideas from a lecture home to study, review and straighten out facts for themselves.

Sociology Professor Judith Blau said quizzes improve students' note-taking and attendance as well as information retention.

"Quizzes are a nuisance to grade for the instructor, but they help to keep students on their toes and give them extra incentive, especially for the 8 a.m. class," Blau said.

Director of the Center for Teaching and Learning Joel Schwartz said he finds his method of collaborative peer teaching and learning effective in helping students prepare for tests.

He gives his students test questions in advance and encourages them to get together in groups to study and prepare the questions.

"It makes a world of difference in not only the information retained but the quality of the answers," Schwartz said. "It helps students to think, organize and write coherent, concise essay answers."

Political Science Professor William Keech said the report prompted him to think of more exercises that might help students in one of his advanced classes to retain more of what is taught. He includes quizzes, tests and a paper in his larger class.

"The advantage is that this tells me what is getting through to the students and how successful I am in can't support factory farming. You could get tuna, but you would be encouraging the slaughter of innocent dolphins caught in drift nets. You crave Oreo cookies, but R.J. Reynolds, which now owns Nabisco, also is on the apartheid list.

It's virtually impossible for consumers to make consistently responsible decisions on how to spend their money. Even if citizens spent an hour each day researching which companies are deserving of their support, they wouldn't find enough socially responsible companies to fill a shopping cart.

We can't sustain ourselves on vegetable soup from the co-op, Huber beer and Ben and Jerry's ice cream forever.

Buying power . . . Published by the Council on Economic Priorities, a New York-based corporate organization advocating responsibility, Shopping for a Better World, A Quick and Easy Guide to Socially Responsible Supermarket Shopping, has received the endorsement of everyone from Bryant Gumbel to Gloria Steinem. The council has seriously applied the legal notion of the corporation as person and developed a thorough system for rating companies, stores and products according to several criteria of concern to those of us who like to know who is on the receiving end of our shopping dollars. The book makes it possible to discern at a glance, for example, that when you purchase a Butterfinger candy bar, you contribute to the manufacture of cigarettes, clearcutting of trees and other destructive environmental practices as well as animal testing and investing in South Africa. ■ Michele Landis, Chicago Flame, U. of Illinois, Chicago can't be reached."

He tries to take them out to dinner about once a week.

"It's like living with Grandpa," said junior Dodie Vela, who lived with Simmons last summer.

"Everything was an advantage," said senior Amy Collier, who lived with Simmons last fall. "The best thing is that it was free."

Although Collier was married while living in Simmons' house, she and her husband had to live apart while he spent fall quarter looking for a job in Birmingham. Even during her husband's frequent visits, the one-step rule applied.

Simmons stays in contact with the women who have lived with him. He can list them all, what they're doing and who they're dating or have married.

Simmons, the 10th of 11 children, is accustomed to a full house and said "It's been a wonderful experience." Simmons said he will have boarders indefinitely.

"I keep telling them I'm going to die," he said. "I don't think I'll keep them after that."

WOMEN'S ENROLLMENT

Image building . . . Out of 4.5 million scientists employed in the United States, about 700,000 are women, according to the National Science Foundation. To help women interested in a career in science but intimidated by male domination in classes and jobs, Margaret Palmer, assistant zoology professor at the U. of Maryland, College Park, teaches a class called "Women in Science." The course focuses on the history and image of the woman scientist, career opportunity trends and feminist analyses of science. Palmer said more women faculty members should be hired to act as role models for students so they can "see that women are active and productive in science, that many of them have families and are interesting people. It gives students the opportunity to envision themselves in that way." ■ Pam Flax, The Diamondback, U. of Maryland, College Park

Men still outnumber women . . .

While females are still underrepresented in many majors, the number of university women majoring in non-traditional areas increased substantially between 1960 and 1980, according to the Office of Institutional Research and Planning at the U. of Delaware. In 1983, the Committee for the Status of Women developed a method to track changes in women's enrollment in the different colleges during two decades. The study shows a significant influx of female agriculture, business, engineering and physical education majors from 1960 to 1980. Before 1980, women majored predominantly in home economics, education and social sciences. Director of Women's Affairs Liane Sorenson said the changes in majors indicate which fields women will enter in the future. "The changes show a real example of expanding opportunities for women," she said. "If you look at the changes in majors, you can see changes in society." ■ Christine Smith, The Review, U. of Delaware

IN BRIEF

Record donations . . . Lionel E. "Lee" Rombach, 75, said he will die a happy man because he has helped more than 100 U. of Arizona students pay for their studies. "I love young people," Rombach said. "The best thing I can do is help them with their education." He has been funding scholarships since 1973. After contributing more than $100,000 in scholarships awarded to UA religious studies majors over the past 10 years, Rombach was unanimously named the UA 1989 Individual Scholarship Donor of the Year. UA Director of Scholarship Development J. Julius Humphrey said Rombach has given everything he has to UA's scholarship program. "Lee Rombach is an amazing person," Humphrey said. "We have donors that give more money than he does, but they don't put near as much heart into it as he does." Rombach does not have children of his own, but calls the scholarship recipients his surrogate sons and daughters. ■ Kathy Epperson, Arizona Daily Wildcat, U. of Arizona communicating my ideas," Keech said.

English Professor Jerry Mills said giving frequent quizzes in his Shakespeare course helped raise the class average by a letter grade.

"(Quizzes help) students prepare at intervals throughout the course," he said. "Then they can review for the test instead of going back and reading it all for the first time," he said.

Students' opinions of quizzes are more divided than their professors'.

Brendan Mathews, a junior English major, said tests help him study because they "force me to catch up at certain points and force me to prove to myself how well I know things."

But Caroline Thornton, a freshman English major from Atlanta, Ga., said she hadn't found the quizzes to be especially helpful.

"I don't know if they really help you to learn anything," she said. "You can memorize and forget it all the next day."

■ The Frietower
U. of Maryland, Baltimore County

Joy glides some pearly pink gloss over her lips. She then puts on the finishing touches — a little highlighter and a smudge of liner above her thick, long lashes. Then...

Scrutinizing herself in the mirror, she begins to see the ruddiness of her skin, the differing shapes of her eyes. The imperfections begin to surface like sediment rising in a rippling pond. Ugh! She feels dismayed; her nose is too broad and her smile is too gummy.

Regretfully, she looks at the magazine on the sink, feeling the widening difference between herself and the woman on the page. The ad reads, "Don't hate me because I'm beautiful."

The international cosmetic and fragrance industry promises to deliver what the ads portray — perfect parts blending into a perfect whole.

No longer are we simply females, but Max Factor faces. Ivory girls and Halston women. Beauty is never ourselves as our undone selves; rather, beauty is in the bottle we smear on our faces, the latest technological advancement for womankind.

The ads can't deliver what they espouse because they, in fact, are not real. As an ex-model myself, I witnessed the tricks of the trade. Many models are primed and propped in extreme conditions by extreme means: make-up artists, special lighting, camera angles, tummy tucks, breast implants, liposuction, tooth bonding... not to mention airbrushing, which may significantly alter the original photograph.

Our beauty images are impossible to achieve. We are therefore bound to fail in meeting the standards. Why bother trying? Because failing to conform to the accepted standards of attractiveness may create social repercussions.

Notice when we don't wear make-up, we are met with such greetings as "Are you feeling OK today? You look a little pale." The politics of appearance is no game.

Bungee jumpers stretch it to the limit

By Peter Gavin

■ The Orion
California State U., Chico

As I climbed over the railing, the emerald green pool of a northern California river stood below me. I didn't know if I could find the courage to send the message from my brain to my thigh muscles to propel myself off the bridge and into the air. Like a giant umbilical cord, a glorified rubber band attached to my belly would be my lifeline.

My arms were wrapped around the railing behind me. Austin Wedemeyer, the leader of this bungee-jumping adventure, asked me to tell him when I was ready.

Wedemeyer began the countdown.

"Five." Why did I say I was ready?

"Four." Am I crazy?

"Three." That's a 10-story drop.

"Two." I don't have to jump.

"One." Aaahhhhhhhhhhh!

I'm over the edge, picking up speed rapidly with the ground closing in — fast. The feeling is nothing short of exhilarating, times 10. I'm terrified. I'm out of my mind.

My stomach is in my throat as I start to roll forward out of my swan dive. I don't feel the resistance of the bungee yet, and the ground is getting awfully close.

After a 70-foot free fall, the bungee begins to stretch. Gradually, it decelerates my body, teasing the pull of the earth. Fifty feet later, the process is complete, and for a fraction of a second, I have stopped falling and the terror has eased.

I have forgotten during the last three seconds that what goes down on a bungee must come up. I emit a guttural scream.

Suddenly, I'm being launched skyward and the terror resumes. My arms and legs are flailing about as I try to swim in the air to gain some sort of control. I feel like a yo-yo being flung around by a five-year-old giant.

Gravity takes over and down I go. My screams of pure terror now include a hint of laughter and exhilaration, knowing the bungee works and the worst is over.

The bouncing is finally complete about 20 seconds after my leap. I swing on the cord above the water for awhile, recovering from the intense excitement and trying to breathe again.

Few people have leaped from a 185-foot bridge and lived to tell about it. Thankfully, I am one who has.

I got my chance through Wedemeyer, a fellow student at Chico, who runs a bungee-jumping business called Austy Adventure.

Duke officials admit to mail tampering

By Craig Whitlock

■ The Chronicle
Duke U.

In an attempt to monitor the activities of sports agents, a Duke U. advisory committee intercepted and opened mail addressed to athletes.

The practice was discontinued by Keith Brodie, president of the university, after he was informed of the diversion process. While Brodie said he did not know the legality of the situation, he said he did not approve.

The Duke Student Athlete Counseling Committee began rerouting athletes' mail about five years ago, said Jeff Potter, a member of the committee.

Any mail sent to athletes' mailboxes in the athletic department by sports agents was regularly diverted to Potter by coaches and secretaries in an attempt to record agents' names and register them with the committee.

Potter said he opened about 20 percent of the mail he received. If an agent's return address was showing on an envelope, Potter said he would record it without tampering with the letter.

University officials became concerned about the ethical implications of the situation. "This committee that was set up was perhaps a bit overzealous," Brodie said. "Certainly, it might violate any ethical standards."

In regard to federal laws, once the postal service transports mail to an institution, such as a university, "that mail is considered delivered" and is no longer subject to postal regulations, said Jim Birch of the U.S. Postal Inspection Service in Washington, D.C.

Birch said he did not rule out the possibility that the committee members may have violated certain state laws.

At least one Duke football player said he was upset with the practice, and as a result, signed with an agent without using the advisory committee's services.

"For some reason, my mail was being opened.... Sometimes, I didn't get something for a week, a month, sometimes even three months," wide receiver Clarkston Hines said.

Unaided by the advisory members, Hines chose Harold "Doc" Daniels, a Los Angeles-based agent who faced an investigation in Texas and Georgia for not registering with those states before signing players.

Potter defended opening the mail by saying that he thought the practice was generally accepted among coaches and athletes. "I never thought that what I was doing was wrong," he said. "There's really nothing suspicious or subversive."

Potter added that re-viewing athletes' mail was done to protect the players and the university by keeping track of agents. He said that athletes from such sports as men's and women's basketball also have had their mail checked.

Some athletes said they appreciated the committee's concern. Regardless, Brodie said Hines' unhappiness with having his mail checked may have backfired on the committee and thwarted its original intention of helping athletes find reputable agents.

COLLEGE EDITORS & WRITERS PICK PRESEASON TOP 20

Can the 'Canes do it again in 1990?

The Miami Hurricanes captured the top spot in the third annual U. The National College Newspaper Top 20 College Football Poll.

Before the first game of the season, college sports editors and writers from 14 schools across the nation ranked their favorites. The student journalists represent the major NCAA conferences and independents.

Points were assigned based on the ratings — 20 points for No. 1 and one point for No. 20.

Thirty-nine teams were selected, including such long shots as Hawaii.

Clay Rasmussen, sports editor at Texas A&M U.'s The Battalion, picked Auburn as No. 1. He said, "The South looks strong this year.... The Tigers, along with Tennessee, Auburn and Alabama and the SWC's powerhouses — Texas A&M, Arkansas and Houston — will show the nation that the old adage 'The South will rise again' is not to be taken lightly."

While Mike Penn of Vanderbilt U.'s The Hustler chose Miami as the dominant

Ball State athletes score high grades

By Betsy Williams

■ The Ball State Daily News
Ball State U.

Athletes at Ball State U. seem to have overcome the "dumb jock" stereotype.

A study by Athletic Advisor Michael Mahan shows grade point averages for Ball State athletes are higher than the averages of all undergraduates on campus.

The comparison was recorded beginning in the winter quarter of 1985. The spring 1989 GPAs for male athletes averaged 2.645 on a 4.0 scale, compared to 2.616 for all undergraduate men. Women athletes averaged 2.895, compared to 2.816 for their female peers.

Mahan attributes the pattern of high grades to the strong emphasis the entire community places on academics.

"We bring in good kids to begin with," he said. "They are already well-adjusted and disciplined enough to handle the NCAA grade requirements, which are even tougher in the Mid-American Conference."

Those rules state that freshman athletes must earn at least a 1.8 cumulative grade point average and maintain that during their sophomore year. As juniors and seniors, student athletes must achieve a 2.0.

Grades that come near the minimum requirements receive strict attention from coaches, Mahan said.

"It's like your parents cutting off your money supply when you fail a test," he said. "Coaches have the same authority to bench you for poor grades."

Don Purvis, director of men's intercollegiate athletics, said athletes' high grades are nothing new at Ball State.

"The coaching staff has always done a good job of recruiting athletes who are achievers — ones that are continuously reminded of their responsibilities if they wish to compete," he said.

The stricter MAC requirements and individual counseling also contribute to academic success among athletes, Purvis said.

"I have so much respect for those who can undertake so much and still excel in a sport. Some of these kids even take 19 or 20 hours," he said.

Mahan, who reviews the academic eligibility of the student athletes, said, "They don't have the opportunity to take blow-off classes.... I tell all my students, 'Once you learn how to play the game of college, it becomes easy.'" one jump and $80 for two, requires jumpers to sign a legal waiver and use cords that are manufactured to military specifications.

Jumpers are connected to the cord by a seat and chest harness that distributes the force of the resisting bungee over a person's entire torso. As the bungee stretches gradually during the jumper's fall, the harness automatically rotates the body into the correct position.

After a leap, the jumper is brought back up to the bridge using pulleys and the strength of three or four people.

Although some nervous prospective jumpers reconsider, never making it off the railing, Wedemeyer described bungee-jumping as the "ultimate thrill."

Michigan shines in solar car race

By Ian Hoffman

■ The Michigan Daily
U. of Michigan, Ann Arbor

While Apollo's chariot may be the world's first solar-powered vehicle, it's no longer the most famous.

In late July, the U. of Michigan's solar car, the Sunrunner, won first place in the 1,800-mile cross-country General Motors Sunrayce USA.

As she climbed out of the cockpit, driver Paula Finnegan said she is "incredibly excited" about being able to join the two other top finishers at the World Solar Challenge in Australia this November.

One factor, money — and lots of it — was most often credited with securing the win for Michigan. The Sunrunner's $800,000 price tag, most of which came from donations, is five or six times higher than the average car's cost.

The second through fifth place winners, respectively, were: Western Washington U.; U. of Maryland, College Park; California State U., Los Angeles; and Crowder College of Neosho, Mo.

STUDENTS SET WORLD RECORD

They did it... Wichita State U. students Shannon Grate and Michael Bornholdt now hold the world record for tennis marathons. The two started playing tennis at 7 a.m. on a Friday afternoon and slept only nine hours until they finished at 7 p.m. the following Thursday — after playing 156 hours. When asked how he felt, Bornholdt simply lifted his drink to his mouth and poured it down his shirt. "Other than losing all muscle control, we're fine," he said. Grate added, "You've got to be tough; there's no room for quitters." Grate proved his stamina by winning 148 sets, compared to Bornholdt's 132. The marathon was a fundraiser for the Student Organization of Social Work. When asked what he would do if someone broke the record, Grate said, "I'll tell ya, I'd sure wait a while before I got it back." ■ Kytra Heston, Sunflower, Wichita State U.

Crime in dorms down after alcohol ban

By Pete O'Connell
■ The Crimson White
U. of Alabama, Tuscaloosa

A policy banning alcohol from all campus residence halls at the U. of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, appears to have resulted in a decline in vandalism and violence there.

Housing and Research Coordinator Jim Purcell said records from one statistical group of hall residents—comprised of 1,200 male and female students—showed a decline in reports of vandalism from 22 during the 1988-89 academic year to three last year.

The same statistical group experienced a decline in assaults from 19 to eight.

Renee Stiegele, a resident assistant in one of the dorms, said she has seen a measurable reduction in vandalism since the new policy was instituted.

"Vandalism has dramatically declined," she said, adding that by the end of a typical semester she would find six or seven holes in her residents' walls. But at the end of the term last spring, she didn't find a single hole.

The number of incidents declined significantly since then, he said, adding that some of the school's four housing areas reported no incidents of vandalism or violence at all for several months, an almost unprecedented situation for the school's residence halls.

Taylor said residents' acceptance of the policy is evidenced by the fact that only three students were cited more than once for alcohol violations near the close of the spring semester.

Josey Viselli, president of the Residence Hall Association, said he agreed a more restrictive alcohol policy was necessary, mainly because a significant number of university students have substance abuse problems.

"If you get drunk on almost a daily basis... then wouldn't it be good if we can change that while you're in a learning environment?" Viselli asked.

RESPONSIBLE SERVING

Bartenders getting TIPS... A new program formulated by the city of Champaign-Urbana, Ill., is taking a little different approach this fall to solving ongoing problems related to drinking; its aim is to educate the servers, not the consumers. Participating bartenders from pubs and clubs in town are being taught ways to serve alcohol more responsibly—and how to intervene when patrons have had too much to drink. The city's health department runs the program, called TIPS—an acronym for Training for Intervention Procedures by Servers of alcohol. The program is designed to reduce alcohol-related deaths and injuries, said Beth Lencioni, education director for the department. ■ Brian Reck, The Daily Illini, U. of Illinois, Champaign-Urbana the same, but I can't, no matter how hard I try. The pain from him goes into me doubled, tripled. Each new medicine, each new shot, doesn't make me feel better that they are helping; they make me fear even more because they may not work.

The lifeline between Peter and the living world is me. All I can do is hold the other end, despite my tired, blistered fingers' desire to just let go.

I look at my brother and hug him. We are still together for now, my superman and I. He still finds something that keeps him in this life, a life that refuses to acknowledge him for what he is, yet persecutes him for being a victim. I can't even numb myself no matter how many mathematical equations I think up. I reach to hold his hand; the slight delay in my grip went unnoticed by him. A bony finger strokes my palm, but the wet, cold hand strokes my fear. His hand, once whole, is now a reminder of his plague.

Looking into his sunken eyes, I try to smile.

I remember the time when Peter lost a wrestling match at the university. I remember he grabbed me by the neck and tweaked my nose, saying, "I let him win so I could get his phone number." We both laughed so long and so hard we made a spectacle of ourselves in the middle of the locker room.

I think of his rich, booming laugh and start laughing again; Peter, catching the cue, laughs with me. I laugh as if it is our last. I laugh to cover the truth, and we laugh long, trying to drown out the sound of a phone ringing in my head over and over.

ment systems. And because we market it directly from our factory, it costs hundreds less than it would in stores.

Model Eleven's three speakers are designed to work with a room's acoustics to create seamless, musically accurate sound virtually identical to our critically acclaimed Ensemble™ speaker system. And it can be used anywhere in the world—115- or 230-volts AC, or 12-volts DC. It fits under an airline seat (or can be checked as baggage) so you can take it anywhere. But Model Eleven's sound is so good, so "big," you may want to keep it home. At $749† we know of no music system near its price (transportable or not) that approaches its sound quality.

"Cambridge SoundWorks May Have The Best Value In The World. A Winner."

David Clark—Audio Magazine

Ensemble is a speaker system that can provide the sound once reserved for the best speakers under laboratory conditions. It virtually disappears in your room. And because we market it directly, it costs hundreds less than it would in stores.

Your living room works with Ensemble, not against it.

No matter how well a speaker performs, at home your room takes over. Putting other speakers where the room helps the bass may hinder the upper ranges, or vice-versa. Ensemble consists of four units: two bass units and two high frequency "satellites." The compact woofer units produce the bass that naturally requires large speakers. Place them behind furniture, on bookshelves or under a couch. The small satellites blend into any decor. The result: a full range, musically accurate speaker system without big boxes.

At only $599† (or $499† with utility woofer cabinets)—complete with all hardware and 100' of speaker cable—Ensemble is the value on today's speaker market. Esquire magazine describes them by saying, "You get a month to play with the speakers before you either return them or keep them. But you'll keep them." Stereo Review said "It's hard to imagine going wrong with Ensemble."

Unlike satellite systems which use a single large subwoofer, Ensemble features separate compact bass units for each stereo channel. They fit more gracefully into your living environment, and help minimize the effects of the listening room's sound waves.

Made in U.S.A.

For BassCase, Model Eleven's bass speaker enclosure, which doubles as the entire system's carrying case.

Ambiance™ by Henry Kloss.

Ambiance is an ultra-compact speaker that proves high performance, small size and low cost need not be mutually exclusive. Stereo Review said "very few small speakers we have heard can match the overall sound of Ambiance, and we know of none that surpass it." In Nextel or primed for painting, $109† each. In solid oak, $129† each.

- Separate your long distance calls from your roommates' calls, with *AT&T Call Manager. It's FREE. This service is a convenient way to identify who made each long distance call. Every month, you'll get an itemized summary of all AT&T Long Distance calls made with each caller's AT&T Call Manager code.

- When away from your own phone keep in touch with a FREE AT&T Calling Card. It's the least expensive way to call, next to direct dialing on the AT&T Long Distance Network, and you don't even need to have telephone service in your name to get one.

- Get great discounts on brand name products and services with your free AT&T Student Saver Plus Passport. From AT&T computers to video rentals, the AT&T Student Saver Plus Passport provides real savings for students throughout the year.

All these savings come with the most reliable long distance service you can get—AT&T. The long distance service whose operators give you immediate credit for misdialed calls. And delivers uncompromising sound quality, quick connections and courteous, dependable operator service 24 hours a day. AT&T Long Distance Service lets you call more international locations than any other company.

When the question is quality, convenience and value, there's no better answer than AT&T.

Call toll free, 1 800 654-0471, Ext. 5382 to take advantage of the personalized AT&T Student Saver Plus, or fill out the attached postage paid application and mail it in.

FREE! Sign up now for one or more services in the AT&T Student Saver Plus and you'll get an AT&T Long Distance Gift Certificate—good for 60 minutes of AT&T Long Distance direct dialed, coast-to-coast, night and weekend calling.

Some services may not be available to on campus students or in all areas. Must have true touch tone telephone and service for AT&T Call Manager.

Offer limited to one $8.00 AT&T Long Distance Gift Certificate per student. You could get more or less minutes depending on where and when you call.
